D. C. Granted $1,000,000 to Banish Slums With U.S. Aid

Fund Will Enable Alley Authority to Finish Year's Program.

Speedy Approval In Congress Slated

Straus Discloses Plan to Extend Wagner Act to Washington.

A grant of $1,000,000 allocated by President Roosevelt to the slum reclamation program of the District Alley Dwelling Authority was announced yesterday by Housing Administrator Nathan Straus.

Straus at the same time revealed plans for legislation that would place the Alley Dwelling Authority here "on the same plane" as other local housing authorities throughout the country.

Proposing to extend provisions of the Wagner-Steagall act fully to cover the District, Straus pointed out that the ADA would thereby be eligible for loans up to 90 per cent of the development cost of housing projects and also for a lump-sum grant or annual subsidies.

The $1,000,000 to be allocated by Presidential order to the ADA will be made available only when Congress passes the necessary appropriation. Considering chances of failure "infinitesimally small," John Ihlder, executive officer of the ADA, stated last night that he did not expect the funds to be voted for at least "two or three weeks."

Way Open for Definite Plans.

"Pleased" to receive the grant, Ihlder said that "it will enable us to carry on our program during the present fiscal year—until June 30. We can now go ahead with more definite plans—but we won't spend any money until we have it."

Although the ADA last fall had asked for $7,000,000 "for the next two years," Ihlder explained that only "something over a million" had been requested for the period ending June 30, 1938.

In announcing the grant, which is the first Federal contribution to the District's reclamation program under the housing act of 1937, Straus declared that "it is my feeling that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt are very anxious for an extensive program of slum rehousing."

Straus stated that he would like to see legislation for putting the ADA on the same plane as other authorities, so that housing developments in Washington might become a demonstration of what can be done.

Conference With Hazen.

The Administration proposals to bring the ADA completely under the Wagner-Steagall act were made public yesterday following a conference between Straus, Ihlder, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and legal counsel.

Enactment of the program will enable the District to borrow up to 90 per cent of the development cost of projects (the remaining 10 per cent to be supplied locally); and will further permit the District to receive either an annual subsidy or an outright grant for low-rental housing.

[A proposed amendment to the present housing act would allow local authorities to borrow the entire sum necessary for development of projects. If this provision is ac-

'Hello, Washington!' Star Shouts.

Louise Fazenda, of the screen, had a big greeting for the Capital when she arrived yesterday to join other screen celebrities at the President's Birthday Ball tonight.

Seven Balls and Countless Other Functions to Help War on Infantile Paralysis; Roosevelt to Make Brief Radio Address.

Washington will turn out in holiday mood today to celebrate the President's birthday and contribute to the national campaign against infantile paralysis.

Hollywood-in-Washington will gain four more recruits this morning when Janet Gaynor, Joe E. Brown, Tommy Kelly and Anne Gillis step off the Liberty Limited at Union Station.

The District branch of the film colony already includes Mr. and Mrs. Fredric March and Louise Fazenda, who came to town yesterday, as well as Eleanor Powell and Ray Bolger, who arrived Thursday.

Vera Zorina, 20-year-old Goldwyn discovery and former Ballet Russe dancer, is also here from Hollywood, while Patricia Bowman, formerly of Washington, and Maria Gambarelli, both ballerinas, have arrived from New York.

Although keeping a number of public engagements during the day, the stage and screen celebrities will find the spotlight brightest when they make the rounds tonight of the seven Washington hotels giving major "Birthday Balls" and the midnight shows at the Capitol and Earle Theaters.

Sale of the $2.50 tickets for the dances has mounted sharply in the past two days, with arrival of the stars, celebration officials reported. Numerous Government employes have taken advantage of the ar-

Jackson Shuns Richberg Plan For Monopolies

Wouldn't Relax Laws to Let Big Industries Agree on Stabilization Plan.

By the Associated Press.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Robert H. Jackson, President Roosevelt's right-hand man in the fight against "monopoly," threw cold water tonight upon proposals that the anti-trust laws be relaxed to permit each big industry to agree on a stabilization plan.

Referring to suggestions that such business planning under Government supervision be legalized, the Assistant Attorney General declared:

"I have an instinctive distrust of the long-time ability of Government to regulate rather than prevent concentration of control. Experience demonstrates, particularly in the public utility industry, that Government regulation tends too frequently over a period of time to pass under the control of those who are supposed to be regulated."

Some observers believed his remarks were aimed at proposals made earlier this week by Donald

D. C. Only City Failing to Help 'Employables'

37,000 Jobless, Capital Becomes the 'Horrible Example' for U. S.

By Edward T. Folliard

Washington, long hailed as a "model city," today is a horrible example in its treatment of the poor. So far as is known, it is the only city in the United States that does not help its destitute "employable" residents who cannot get a job.

Whole families are literally starving, shivering in January cold, poorly clad and in many cases facing eviction from their miserable homes.

Why?

The answer to that is the answer to a situation that has aroused every philanthropist, every churchman and every charity worker who has looked into the facts.

Willing to Work.

The misery and the destitution in so many homes do not exist because the father is a ne'er-do-well who refuses to work. Often it is because he cannot get work. And being "employable"—that is, able to work—

AFL Refuses Burke Aid in Labor Study

Green's Group Loath to Follow Up Criticism of Agency.

Burke Presses Demands; Chamber of Commerce Complains.

By Robert C. Albright.

The American Federation of Labor, persistent critic of National Labor Relations Board policies, yesterday unexpectedly withheld support from a proposed Senate investigation of alleged extra-legal labor board proceedings and pro-Committee for Industrial Organization sympathies.

Action followed charges aimed at the board by Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee. Burke declared the board discriminated between A. F. L. and C. I. O. unions, interfered with freedom of the press and created general labor "unrest."

Burke Presses for Inquiry.

Charlton Ogburn, general counsel of the A. F. L., wrote the sub-committee that the investigation was "unnecessary and uncalled for," as Burke resumed the stand to elaborate charges. Reports from Miami had quoted William Green, president of the A. F. L., as opposed to the inquiry.

Burke said he was unable to account for the Federation's apparent change of attitude, but was determined nonetheless to press for the investigation.

Support meanwhile came from a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce, which asked a thorough Congressional investigation of the labor relations act and its administration. Their report to the chamber's board of directors said an inquiry would determine whether the act should be replaced or promptly corrected "of its manifest deficiencies."

Ogburn's letter was received as the Senate sub-committee concluded second day hearings on the Burke resolution, and called J. Warren Madden, chairman of the labor board, to testify next Thursday. Burke already had cited action of the A. F. of L. convention in Denver last October condemning the board's alleged attempts to "destroy the validity of contracts entered into between legitimate organizations and their employes."

Burke told reporters he was "surprised" at Ogburn's letter and Green's Florida statement. He said he had been given "every reason to believe" the federation would support the inquiry.

Ogburn Praises Madden.

On Tuesday, Paul Scharrenberg, of the International Seamen's Union, had called the board a 99 per cent "C. I. O. organization." On behalf of the American Federation of Labor, Scharrenberg urged legislation depriving the NLRB of jurisdiction Record Navy Asked.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to guard the frontiers of the United States with the biggest Navy in the Nation's history.

The simple statement—"we are compelled to think of our own National safety"—was the basis for his seven-point national defense program submitted to the Congress in a special message.

Coincident with reception of the President's message, Chairman Carl Vinson, of Georgia, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, introduced a bill to carry out the recommendations. Hearings will begin Monday, and yesterday's indications were that opposition would be merely perfunctory, with swift passage certain.

21 Fighting Ships Asked

The naval building program, as presented by the President and specified in the Vinson bill, would authorize 69 new vessels—47 of them fighting ships. Completion of the program would give the United States 278 combatant ships, more than any foreign navy now has, but fewer than Great Britain will have by 1942, the President's goal for completion, according to reports.

In his message, remarkable for its simplicity and restraint, the President noted the many efforts for many years by this Government to establish "at least the probability of world peace."

He further noted the failure of these efforts, while pledging their continuance by his Administration, and then cited the increase in world armaments as a basis for additional naval protection for the national security. He said:

"It is an ominous fact that at least one-fourth of the world's population is involved in merciless devastating conflict in spite of the fact that most people in most countries, including those where conflict rages, wish to live at peace. Armies are fighting in the Far East and in Europe; thousands of civilians are being driven from their homes and bombed from the air. Tension throughout the world is high."

Asks 3 Additional Battleships.

The President asked for the authorization and appropriation of $17,330,000 for additions to Army material and personnel, divided as follows:

$8,800,000 for additional anti-aircraft materials, $6,800,000 of this to be appropriated for the fiscal year 1939;

$10,000 Haul Made By Chevy Chase Mansion Looters

Thieves ransacked the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Joerissen, socially prominent Chevy Chase, Md., residents, who live at 6900 Connecticut avenue, and escaped with more than $10,000 in loot, Montgomery County police learned last night.

The theft was reported by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Clark, butler and maid in the Joerissen home. Mr. and Mrs. Joerissen and Mrs. Joerissen's daughter, Miss Kay Joachim, had gone to Florida.

After a vacation in Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Clark returned to the Connecticut avenue address yesterday. The robberis apparently used a skeleton key and ransacked the house from top to bottom.

The loot included a $2,000 mink coat, family silverware, linen and much jewelry.

Geneva, Jan. 28.—Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia agreed tonight after delaying consultations to seek co-operation of the United States in supplying arms, ammunition and war supplies to China.

The plan was informally communicated to Washington tonight through official channels.

The plan was developed as a compromise to prevent China from disrupting the League of Nations Council, in the midst of its 100th session, by reinstating her demands for League sanctions against Japan.

In addition to war supplies, the major powers would supply China with credits to carry on her resistance to Japan.

The proposal to give material and financial aid to China was brought up at the ill-fated Far Eastern Peace Conference in Brussels last fall but collapsed when Britain and France pointed out that United States support would be uncertain and that a declaration of war by Japan would automatically put the United States neutrality law into effect.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to France, was reported to have asserted during today's consultation that China wanted League sanctions against Japan. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Britain and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France were said to have replied that sanctions were impossible at this time, but suggested the compromise later agreed upon with Russia.

President Roosevelt spent an hour in conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Undersecretary Sumner Welles and Ambassador at Large Norman Davis last night as dispatches from Geneva reported that Great Britain, France and Soviet Russia agreed to ask this country to aid in supplying munitions to China. The trio refused to answer questions.

Senate Drops Fight to Break Lynch Impasse

Early Sidetracking of Measure Forecast by Opponents.

Efforts to break the Southern filibuster against the anti-lynching bill were abandoned by the Senate's Administration leadership yesterday, and early sidetracking of the measure was forecast jubilantly by opposition managers.

A two-day Senate recess was ordered by Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, after a 20-minute conference with President Roosevelt. Temporarily, the anti-lynching bill will be laid aside Monday to permit consideration of the Administration's housing report.

Later in the week a move will be made by Southern opponents to displace anti-lynching permanently for other Administration measures.

There were an estimated 40 votes last night to discard anti-lynching for the session, as Senators disheartened by the failure of cloture efforts promised aid to break the log jam in favor of other business.

The halt in night sessions and the two-day week-end recess was ordered as the opposition opened a new filibustering siege.

Senators Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, told the Senate he was ready "to make a thirty-day speech," and sought the floor by unanimous consent.

"Thirty days without recess?" asked Barkley.

"It's immaterial to me," said Bilbo.

Barkley said he would be glad to grant unanimous consent if Bilbo thought he could speak for 30 days. In the end, the leader agreed the

Japan Prepares For War With A Third Power

Threat of Future Aid to China Cited to Diet by Gen. Sugiyama.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 28.—The powerful Japanese war minister, Gen. Gen Sugiyama, told parliament today Japan must prepare to fight an unnamed third power because of the undeclared war against China.

Gen. Sadao Araki, who, as war minister directed Japan's 1931-33 conquest of Manchuria, frankly declared last October 25 that "it probably is necessary for Japan to strike directly at Russia."

(Araki recently emerged from retirement to become a member of the cabinet advisory council on the war. He has been reported likely to enter the cabinet soon.)

Gen. Sugiyama assured parliament that Japan's military strategists were "mapping plans carefully to meet all contingencies.

"Since Japan must fight a long-term war with China, we must prepare for a country other than China."

In answer to questions put by members of the Diet, Sugiyama said Japanese forces in China must be increased now to meet the threat of immediate or future aid for China which he found evident in arms shipments through Mongolia, Canton and Indo-China.

"In any event the imperial army holds the key to settlement," he said.

(A Russian official news agency dispatch last month from Hankow, provisional Chinese capital, said war material had been sent from Russia to China but asserted that Japanese reports of its extent were exaggerated.)

Policeman Slain as 5 Bandits Shoot Way Out of Pawnshop

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 28.—Five young gunmen shot their way out of a police trap in a Bronx pawnshop holdup today, killing one policeman and wounding another, but only three of the five escaped.

One, identified by police as a killer who had served time in an insane asylum, was shot in the throat and taken to a hospital under guard. Another, listed as George de Renzzio, 25, paroled robber, was captured after a short chase.

Sergeant David Kilpatrick, 56, who arrived at the pawnshop in a police radio car just as the gunmen were about to leave, was shot four times, twice as he lay prostrate. He died on the way to the hospital.

His companion, Patrolman Royal W. Pollitt, 35, felled one of the holdup men before a bullet creased his chest, tore through his uniform and shattered his right arm.

A second police car screamed up too late to catch three of the thugs who jumped into an automobile and escaped, empty-handed, in the traffic of the Grand Concourse.

The wounded bandit was identified as Martin J. Lavin.

Nanking Embassy Head Contradicts Claim He Disobeyed Sentry.

Word 'American' Renewed Blows

Seizure of Woman on Foreign Property Was Under Investigation.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull last night sent instructions to American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew at Tokyo to make emphatic representations to the Japanese government over the slapping of a United States diplomatic officer in China by a Japanese soldier.

The diplomatic officer was John M. Allison, Third Secretary of the American Embassy at Nanking. According to his report to the State Department, he was slapped across the face by a Japanese soldier on Wednesday while engaged in an investigation of charges that Japanese soldiers had raped a Chinese woman they had illegally taken from the premises of Nanking University, an American institution.

The State Department did not reveal the text of the instructions to Ambassador Grew. But it made public a lengthy statement regarding the slapping incident which included fulsome excerpts of Allison's report to the State Department. Allison's report flatly contradicts the official Japanese version of the incident.

Grew was instructed, it is understood, to make "representations" regarding the incident. This is not so strong a diplomatic action as making a "protest." However, making of representations, in which the known facts are submitted and an explanation is asked, may be the prelude to a protest if satisfactory explanation is not forthcoming.

Third "Irritant."

Nevertheless this incident takes its place beside the Panay bombing and the sharply worded protest made to the Japanese foreign office last week—and made public here Tuesday—over Japanese "outrages" against American property in China as irritants to peaceful American-Japanese relations.

Allison, in his report to the State Department under date of Thursday, explained he was engaged in investigating an aspect of irregular Japanese entry of American property, accompanied by Charles Riggs, an American citizen and a member of the Nanking University faculty, when the slapping occurred. The two Americans also were accompanied by a Japanese consular policeman and Japanese gendarmes.

The American diplomat, in his report, asserted he was obeying the order of the Japanese soldier to leave the compound of a Chinese house when "he slapped me across the face and then turned and did the same to Mr. Riggs."

Attacked Again.

"The gendarmes with us," Allison continued, "tried feebly to stop the soldier and one of them said in Japanese 'these are Americans' or words to that effect. We were then outside the gate on the street. As soon as the soldier heard we were Americans he became livid with rage, repeated the word 'Americans' and also attempted to attack Mr. Riggs who was nearest to him. The gendarmes prevented him but he succeeded in tearing the collar and some buttons off Mr. Riggs' shirt.

"In the meantime the officer in command of the unit appeared and shouted at us in an offensive man-

Ickes Plunges Into Open Feud With West, Shatters His Office Force and Ousts His Kin

The Interior Department, abode of tapped wires, gumshoe operatives and other manifestations of dark intrigue, yesterday resounded to a head-on collision between Secretary Harold L. Ickes and Undersecretary Charles West.

Behind it, according to friends of Ickes, was the six-week delay in Senate confirmation of Ebert K. Burlew to be First Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Ickes, scrappiest member of the Roosevelt Cabinet, cleaned house in West's office, dismissing James A. Rohrer, West's brother-in-law and administrative assistant, and transferring three other workers to another office. This left West with only a receptionist and a stenographer.

West, described by his friends as President Roosevelt's "contact man" on Capitol Hill, and by his foes as "Roosevelt's messenger boy," was not consulted about the housecleaning.

The wrecking of West's office staff, it was believed, is merely the first move in a campaign to get West out of the Interior Department. From all indications he was not welcome in the first place. A former House member from Ohio, who helped put through early New Deal legislation, West became a lame duck when he sought a Senate seat in 1934. Thereupon President Roosevelt named him Undersecretary of the Interior, and he continued in his role as liaison between the White House and Congress.

Reports at the time said that Ickes was "jolted" by the appointment; that he had recommended another man, Walter L. Fisher, for the post. Ickes evaded questions as to whether he had recommended West or whether the appointment had originated in the White House.

Previous to this, Secretary Ickes had made things so hot for Emil Hurja, who had been installed in the Interior Department as patronage man by Postmaster General Farley, that Hurja was transferred

U. S. Is Leaving Slump Behind, Rail Chiefs Say

Increase in Carloadings Noted by President of Pennsylvania.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.—Five railway chiefs—including heads of three of the Nation's largest roads—surveyed the business front today and concurred in the opinion that the country was pulling out of the recession.

In Pittsburgh for a directors' meetnig of the Association of American Railroads, the railway executives expressed their views to newspapermen.

M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania, reported a gradual increase in carloadings during January which, he said, indicated increased business for industries served by the company's lines. He added:

"Business has already dragged bottom. It is starting on the upgrade. There will be a great improvement in the spring."

E. E. Norris, president of the Southern Railroad, commented:

"Very soon things wil be humming so that the American people will hardly know they have had a depression or a recession." Business is down as far as it will go and is on the upswing."

L. W. Baldwin, head of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, asserted that "we have not only hit the bottom in this depression, but we are on the way up."

John J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, expressed the opinion that "America has begun to pull out."

H. E. Fries of the Winston-Salem Southbound, felt that business would improve, but asserted it needed a helping hand from Congress.

F. E. Williamson, head of the New York Central, asserted:

"Little buying is being done by America's railroads. This is because they do not have the money. And unless the Interstate Commerce Commission boosts rates there will be no money.

"If rates are boosted, as I believe they will be, the railroads will begin purchasing rails, cars, brakes and other needed materials."

to the pay roll of the Democratic National Committee.

For a year or more, the political gossips had been reporting a growing feud between Ickes and Contact Man West. Then, on December 20, President Roosevelt, on the recommendation of Ickes, nominated Burlew, administrative assistant, to be First Assistant Secretary, succeeding the late Theodore A. Walters.

It was believed that the Senate would confirm Burlew promptly. Ickes issued a statement praising his "ability, loyalty and devotion." There ensued, however, a long-drawn-out investigation by the Senate Public Lands Committee. Wiretapping, the theft of $87,000 by an Interior Department Clerk, the activities of Louis R. Glavis and his staff of investigators all were given an airing by the committee.

At one point Ickes demanded of the committee while he was being questioned:

"Am I on trial here? Is the department on trial?"

Somebody was "feeding" committee members with information that served to prolong the investigation, and much of the information could only have come from persons unusually familiar with the Interior Department.

Burlew has not yet been approved by the committee. Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, who has been asking most of the questions, has given no indication as to when he will complete his investigation.

Meantime, gossip-loving Washington is wondering what Undersecretary West will say when he contemplates his shattered office force, and what will happen if he does say something.

Rohrer, West's brother-in-law and administrative assistant, said Ickes told him that his dismissal took effect immediately and that he asked him to remove his personal belongings and not return to the office.

The employes transferred from West's office to the General Land Office were Charlotte A. Martin, confidential secretary to West; Verna McGugin, stenographer, and Wiley Porter, colored messenger.

Jackson Scorns New 'Trust' Plan

Jackson

R. Richberg, one-time NRA administrator. Richberg suggested establishment of an administrative body empowered to pass upon the prima facie legality of co-operative business activities. He proposed that the administrative body's approval of an activity protect the business men involved against later criminal prosecution, but not against civil suits for illegal combination.

"Many kinds of business would confer with Government," Jackson declared, "not to get the advice of a Government counsel, but immunity from the penal provisions of the anti-trust laws. Unless I misjudge the temper of Congress, it is in no mood to authorize any Government officer to dispense immunities from those laws."

In negotiations such as those proposed to bring about business stabilization agreements, Jackson continued, industries are represented by their own specialists, the Government by "a jack of all trades, a lawyer perhaps."

Jackson aimed several verbal thrusts at the press.

"Nothing more heartens me about the future of American democracy than a good look at the press," he said. "To me the greatest proof that the ingrained instincts of our people are democratic beyond argument is the fact that our democratic government, facing the conditions that elsewhere produced taunting dictatorships, has not even lifted its finger to temper the ardor of a press that is largely critical. . .

Politics and People

Death of Circuit Judge May Provide Solution to Kentucky's Bitter Political Feud.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

Antics of Democratic politics in Kentucky, which have contributed so much gaiety to the national political scene in the last two weeks, may come to an unexpected and sudden ending in the next few days—or they may become funnier than ever.

The latest development is that the death of United States Circuit Judge Charles H. Moorman provided a fresh opportunity for a peaceable settlement of the Kentucky Democratic political feud through a series of moves which would put Senator Marvel Mills Logan on the bench in the seat of the dead jurist and bring Gov. Albert B. ("Happy") Chandler to the Senate.

Those Kentuckians who are horrified by the possibilities of a deadly primary fight for the Senatorial nomination between Gov. Chandler and Senate Democratic Leader ("Dear Alben") Barkley see in this plan a perfect solution of the Kentucky situation. But Senator Barkley's friends are afraid of the plan. They do not want to be charged with "trafficking in the judiciary."

It will be recalled, as revealed here some days ago, that Senator Barkley and his Kentucky supporters were thrown into a panic by an intimation from "Happy" Chandler that he wished to go to the Senate and would challenge the renomination of "dear Alben," if necessary to realize that ambition.

It also was revealed that in an effort to avoid a clash with "Dear Alben," Gov. Chandler persuaded the Kentucky Legislature to indorse Senator Logan for the Supreme Court, when he and everyone else knew that another Kentuckian, Solicitor General Stanley Reed, was under consideration for the Supreme Court vacancy.

The possibility of avoiding a sharp Barkley-Chandler primary fight appeared ended when the President ignored the Logan indorsement and named Mr. Reed to the Supreme Court. Senator Barkley's friends immediately planned a testimonial dinner in his honor, which was held at Louisville last Saturday night. Gov. Chandler refused to attend the Barkley dinner and his friends countered by giving him a testimonial luncheon, also held last Saturday at Louisville. So much previously was told in this place.

It now appears the Chandler intimations that he would seek to oust Senator Barkley from the Senate created as great a panic in the Administration as among the Democratic leader's Kentucky friends. In the first place, Senator Joseph F. Guffey rounded up four other ardent New Deal Senators and took them out to the Louisville dinner as evidence of the high esteem in which Washington holds "Dear Alben."

Then Mr. Roosevelt decided he wanted to do something to show he was solidly behind Senator Barkley. The most effective thing, of course, since the President could not go to the dinner in person, would be to send a letter expressing "how much we in Washington think of their senior Senator" and further lauding him. But to whom should the letter be sent. It would have been natural to address the letter to Senator Barkley, but then Mr. Roosevelt would have had to use the salutation "Dear Alben." For some reason Washington thinks the "Dear Alben" salutation very funny since the President first used it last summer.

So Mr. Roosevelt decided to send Marvin H. McIntyre, his secretary, down to Louisville to express his sentiments. But it would not do orally to instruct "Mac" to go to Louisville and make a pretty speech in Senator Barkley's behalf. A letter would have to be written over Mr. Roosevelt's signature, so it could be placed in the Congressional Record and such things as that.

So, again, Mr. Roosevelt decided to write a letter to Mr. McIntyre, who works at a desk all day about 30 feet from him and comes into his office 30 or 40 times a day. As it subsequently appeared in the Congressional Record, the letter was addressed to "Hon. Marvin H. McIntyre, The White House, Washington, D. C." It is not revealed whether it was sent to "Mac" by mail. Anyway, "Mac" went down to Louisville to honor Senator Barkley.

The day before he left, the President at his press conference was asked whether Mr. McIntyre would attend the Chandler luncheon. Mr. Roosevelt said he did not know. Since Mr. McIntyre was present, someone asked if the question could be put to him. The President agreed, but hastily added he did not believe Mr. McIntyre's train would arrive in Louisville in time. Mr. McIntyre arrived in Louisville several hours before the Chandler luncheon. But he did not attend the Chandler luncheon.

Another amusing episode of the Barkley testimonial dinner was the spontaneous uprising of approval for the Senate leader. Not only did every single member of the President's Cabinet, strangely enough, simultaneously get the idea to wire Louisville about the merits of the senior Senator from Kentucky, but seemingly so did everybody else in official life. Even the Republican leader of the Senate, Charles L. McNary, sent honeyed words.

Instead of taking fright at all this, Gov. Chandler apparently has become bolder, increasing his irritating remarks at Senator Barkley's expense. Meanwhile, "Dear Alben," rapidly becoming known in Washington as "poor Alben," squirms in the Senate as the anti-lynching filibuster goes on, and Gov. Chandler prods and Senator Pat Harrison "laffs and laffs."

And then with the death of Judge Moorman last Wednesday some purely political-minded Kentuckians thought they saw an avenue of escape for "Dear Alben." They pointed out that Judge Moorman was a Kentuckian and that his place on the Sixth Judicial Circuit bench belonged to a Kentuckian. Why should not that Kentuckian be Senator Logan, a former chief judge of the Kentucky Supreme Court and an erudite lawyer? Moreover, had not Senator Logan been indorsed by the State Legislature for the Supreme Court?

Of course, if Senator Logan is named to the judicial vacancy, Gov. Chandler could resign, his henchmen, Kentucky's Lieutenant Governor, would become Governor and could name "Happy" to the Logan vacancy in the Senate—and everybody would be happy.

The trouble is that Senator Logan does not particularly like such machinations and Senator Barkley last night was widely reported to have given a Justice Department official a severe dressing-down for suggesting such jobbery in judges. Those who do not want the Democratic Party in Kentucky torn asunder by a primary fight retort that Senator Logan and Senator Barkley's friends may "have to rise above principle," as Senator Henry Fountain Ashurst once described it.

Anyway, Senator Barkley had a long session with President Roosevelt late yesterday, and Gov. Chandler is coming to the White House this morning—and we'll see what we'll see!

Senate Drops Fight to Break Anti-Lynching Bill Impasse

Lynch

Mississippian should have the floor Monday.

Most friends of the anti-lynching bill conceded that overwhelming defeat of the cloture motion Thursday sounded its death knell for this session. Senator Lewis Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, who has sought diligently to bring the bill to a vote, said he saw no use in "tying up other Senate business indefinitely."

"We have heard the bill's funeral oration," Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, told reporters. "We have lowered the coffin. All that remains is to throw in the dirt."

Consideration of the housing report Monday will be marked by a new fight by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts, to insert his "prevailing wage" amendment. The amendment, voted into the bill by the Senate, but thrown out in conference, would require payment of prevailing wages to all labor employed under the housing program.

Federal Housing Administration officials say this would nullify the program by shutting off the flow of bank credit. Bankers could not collect on mortgage insurance if a builder violated the act by employing labor at less than prevailing wages, under the Lodge amendment.

The second Westerner to speak against the anti-lynching bill—Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah—held the floor through most of yesterday's session.

King called the Wagner-Van Nuys bill unconstitutional, said it is "fraught with serious dangers to the peace of the country," and declared the Senate "ought not to dissipate its time in futile discussion of an unworthy bill."

"It is an assault upon our federated system," he asserted. "It seeks to degrade the States, to deprive them of inherent rights and powers and to superimpose upon them a nationalistic authority which strikes at the very foundation of this republic."

The Utah Senator said the bill asserted the "philosophy of the totalitarian States as the guide for this republic" and would establish a precedent "which will result in further sabotage of State government and further aggrandizement of the Federal Government."

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, is expected to take the floor in a lengthy defense of the anti-lynching bill bearing his name next week.

When, and if, the anti-lynching bill is laid aside, Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, is expected to move to make the Administration's Government reorganization bill, now on the Senate calendar, the Senate's unfinished business.

Texas Flood Smashes Oil Dam; Fire Is Feared

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 28 (AP).—The swollen Sabine River collapsed an East Texas oil field pit near Gladewater today and 62,000 barrels of crude tumbled into the stream.

The oil, valued at about $36,000, created a fire hazard and operators feared the incident might be repeated. Cother flooding East Texas rivers, swollen from recent rains, forced more than 200 families from their homes.

Employ

he and his family are not eligible for relief.

A man may have 10 children at home; the cupboard may be bare, the fuel bin empty, and yet that man, unable to get a job, can get no help from the Board of Public Welfare. He is an "employable."

Bad Luck's Good Luck.

Now if it should be discovered that this father of 10 had a weak heart, high blood pressure or some other crippling ailment—well, that would be different. Then he would be an "unemployable;" then he would be eligible for relief. His bad luck would, in a sense, be good luck, for his children would get food.

They would, that is, theoretically. Actually there is not even enough money available to take care of the "unemployables."

Two things have brought about the crisis that now confronts Washington: There has been a sharp increase in the number of unemployed here and at the same time a drastic cut in the appropriation for relief.

37,000 Lack Jobs.

The recent unemployment census showed Washington had 37,000 unemployed persons—6 per cent of its population, as against 4.5 per cent for the country as a whole. The District of Columbia Employment Center now has 29,000 persons registered for jobs.

What about the Works Progress Administration? The answer is that WPA is not and never has been able to provide work for all the families in which there are members able and eager to work, and who are without other means of subsistence. At the present time there are only 8,875 persons on Federal and local WPA projects in the District of Columbia.

Policy Adopted in 1937.

The policy of denying relief to employables was adopted in the fiscal year of 1937. There was no alternative. In that year Congress reduced the general relief appropriation for the District to $1,600,000. This was barely enough for the unemployables; consequently, the employables had to be dropped from the relief rolls.

The relief appropriation for the current fiscal year (1938) was cut still further—to $1,336,500. And now the House Appropriations Committee, in reporting the 1939 District supply bill, has made another slash. The relief appropriation in this bill, now before the House, is only $900,000.

The outlook is bleak; in the eyes of many, incredible. The Rev. Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, chairman of the public assistance committee of the Board of Public Welfare, had this to say about it last night:

"The situation in respect to relief in the National Capital probably is worse than that in any comparable city in the United State.

"There is no other large city in the country of which we are aware in which there is so acute a situation of need. Other states and cities are making appropriations for relief of the employables. Here, we not only can make no appropriations of our own for their relief, but are faced with completely inadequate funds for the relief of two-thirds of the unemployable needy as well.

"The situation not only is inhuman, but is discreditable to the Capital of the wealthiest nation in the world."

Chest Funds Earmarked.

Many wonder why the Community Chest cannot help in such a situation. The answer is that the funds of the Chest are earmarked, pledged to sick persons, foster homes, institutions for the aged, and the like. For the Chest to divert its funds would be to break faith with these various institutions and agencies.

The churches have been overwhelmed by destitute families, as was revealed two days ago by the Washington Federation of Churches and Catholic Charities. The Federation said the situation among the city's poor was bordering on "mass starvation."

What is to be done? Efforts will be made to have the Senate increase the item for relief in the District appropriation bill and also get a deficiency appropriation for this winter. If these efforts fail, the District Commissioners will be asked to call on Washingtonians to contribute to a special relief fund.

Another article on the alarming relief situation will appear in The Post tomorrow.

Burke

Ogburn, federation general counsel, in his letter yesterday praised Chairman Madden and said the labor board decisions have been "fair" and demanded by the evidence.

But he said there "are a few members of the board's staff who let their apparent prejudice in favor of the C. I. O. be shown in some of their mediatory activities."

"Considering the fact that there was no group of trained experts in this country available to the board," the Federation's general counsel said, "The general average of the staff is high, although I consider that there are some of the board's appointees who could be replaced with more capable and experienced persons to advantage."

Ogburn said the "point" of his letter was that "a Senate or Congressional investigation of the National Labor Relations Board is unnecessary and uncalled for.

"It might prove an expensive waste of time and money," he said. "Certainly much of the board's valuable time would have to be taken up in the hearings. The board is already greatly behind in its work. Some of the labor unions are anxiously awaiting decisions on cases which were heard last summer. These decisions will be still further delayed if the board's time is taken up with these hearings."

Fears Misuse of Hearings.

Ogburn said he thought the Senate could obtain any desired information about board activities "much more quickly and inexpensively without a public hearing in which prejudices of numerous persons are aired."

"Such public hearings of these prejudices can be taken advantage of and misused by the enemies of labor," he wrote.

"They would be followed, perhaps, by renewed efforts to add anti-labor amendments to the national labor relations act, with a view of putting the unions in a straitjacket. Some of the amendments which have already been suggested to the act would put the unions almost as completely under control of the Federal Government as the so-called labor unions of Italy are under the control of the Fascist government."

Burke last night recalled a letter to a member of the House last November 22 by Green urging recommitment of the wage-hour bill, in which it was argued that the Federation's recent experiences with the Labor Board have convinced it that administration of labor legislation by "independent governmental agencies is fatally defective."

In its request for a Congressional inquiry, the special Chamber of Commerce committee said the Wagner act "has operated in such a way as to prevent employers from taking wholly legitimate steps to protect their own employes from coercion and violence on the part of labor organizations with which the employes have not wished to become associated."

It cited board decisions between July and December, 1937, as "of such a nature to demonstrate the need for Congressional investigation of the act and its administration"

The chamber report said ample evidence could be produced to enable Congress to determine whether or not any Federal tribunal, "no matter how completely staffed, could effectively administer a statute which requires the passing of judgment upon the motives and conduct of tens of thousands of employers in their day-to-day relations with individual employes and their representatives as well."

Like Burke, the report charged adminstration of the act has fostered "unrest." It said the act "has unquestionably let to the outbreak of a number of labor controversies that would not otherwise have arisen. Indeed, according to official Government statistics, there were more strikes during the first ten months of 1937 than occurred in any of the past 20 years."

The chamber report also charged the act, as administered by the board:

"Has prevented employers from bargaining at all for a considerable period of time with organizations representing their employes.

"Has required abrogation of agreements entered into by an employer and a labor organization which subsequently was found, through a board-conducted election, actually to represent a majority of the employes concerned.

Claims Freedom Infringed.

"Has held an employer in violation of the statute when he agreed to the terms of a strike settlement proposed by a State conciliation board.

"Has interfered with legitimate management functions and produced deterrents to the free flow of commerce.

"Has sometimes disregarded desires of substantial groups of workers for representation through labor organizations of their own choice.

"Has made decisions having the effect of 'encouraging employes to engage in soldiering and in insubordination'."

Before the sub-committee yesterday Burke charged the board made "several attempts" to violate freedom of speech and of the press.

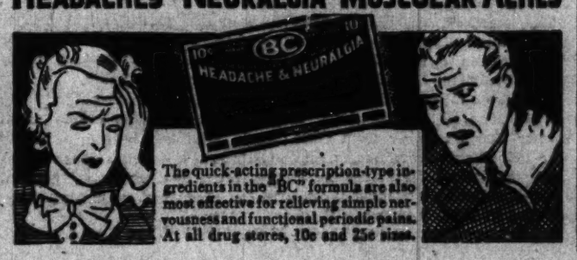

The Nebraska Senator said the board "lost is head" when it subpenaed Hartly W. Barclay, editor of Mill and Factory, to bring in records pertaining to a story in his New York trade magazine about the board's inquiry into charges against the Weirton Steel Co.

He said Harry T. O'Brien, editor of the Daily Press of St. Marys, Pa., was summoned before the board, grilled for several hours, and "literally forced to answer questions concerning both the news items and the editorial policies of his paper."

Senator M. M. Neely (Democrat), West Virginia, sub-committee chairman, came to the board's defense. Neely read a statement recently by the newly appointed Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed urging the country to be slow in believing charges of unfairness against the board in view of the "new and unknown field" it has entered. Reed has said the board "is entitled to sympathetic support from those of us who believe in the principles of fair play established by the act."

Senator Carl A. Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, read an editorial from the Richmond Times-Dispatch, contending freedom of the press was not involved in either the O'Brien or Barclay incidents. The editorial said the editors were called to aid the board in determining if there had been violations of the act by other persons.

U. S. Steel Cuts 'White-Collar' Wages by 9 Pct.

'Share Work' Plan Reduces Office Forces to Five-Day Week.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 28.—White-collar workers of the United States Steel Corporation, from the board's chairman, Myron C. Taylor, to the office boys, were being notified tonight of a "share work" plan which would amount to a pay reduction of approximately 9 per cent.

A high authority, confirming the reduction, estimated that between 20,000 and 25,000 workers would be involved.

Under the plan, effective February 1, the office and executive force will be placed on a five-day week, instead of the present five-and-one-half day schedule.

Several other corporations already have made similar reductions in their office forces, most of them without reducing the base pay.

The reduction has no effect on the approximately 200,000 other employes of the corporation.

Benjamin F. Fairless, president of the corporation, recently informed a senatorial investigating committee wages would have to be reduced if steel prices were forced down.

Capital Arena Of Embattled Silk Factions

Hosiery Workers Parade as Boycotters Stage Fashion Show.

S-i-l-k spelled fireworks yesterday as the "do's" and the "don'ts" staged their respective White House parade and fashion show to prove that Washingtonians should and should not, also respectively, wear silk.

While 300 hosiery workers from Pennsylvania memorialized the President and the State and Labor Departments against the anti-Japanese boycott, Junior Leaguers and society matrons gave a non-silk fashion display at the Wardman Park Hotel to show that the Nipponese cocoon was not indispensable to milady's wardrobe.

The anti-boycotters got in the first word, arriving at Union Station shortly after noon and marching down Constitution avenue waving banners. But the Washington League of Women Shoppers, sponsors of "Life Without Silk; a Drama of Fashion," had the last. Their silkless mannequins were still doing platform pivots when the "Save Our Jobs" marchers were entraining for Philadelphia.

One Difference Apparent.

Both factions were supplied liberally with beautiful girls, chief difference being that the Pennsylvania factory workers flaunted their silk hosiery while the embattled shoppers and their models moved to and fro on legs encased in lisle.

Down Louisiana and Constitution avenues, then up Fifteenth street and past the White House the marchers carried their banners:

We make silk stockings in American Mills. We want to work, we don't want to go on relief.

Use silk and save our jobs.

Why make us the victims of foreign war?

If you boycott 250,000 of us are jobless.

The memorial the crusaders prepared for submission to President Roosevelt urged a boycott of manufactured products from Japan rather than of raw materials, which they said meant employment to workers like themselves.

"For every 10 cents worth of this raw silk we make a product which sells for about 90 cents," they said. "The greater value of our output, you see, comes from our labor and from the investment in the mills and the machinery which we use. Our industry is an American industry."

To Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre the delegation protested "the propaganda of small but loud-spoken groups who would deprive us of our jobs and destroy an American industry in order to cause some slight embarrassment to a foreign power with which we are not at war."

Theater Is Filled.

While all this was going on, the Wardman Park Theater was being filled with persons who sought to find out if it really were true that women could get along with wool, cotton and suede, instead of silk, and to hear what former Ambassador William E. Dodd had to say about the boycott.

Before Lee Simonson, scenic designer and play director, mounted the platform to announce the show, every one of the 500 seats was filled and standees were numerous. In the next 45 minutes the audience, at 75 cents a head, got an eyeful of chic ready-to-wear that had dowagers and sub-debs alike "ohing" and "ahing in admiration.

Simonson presented models—young Washington women—in garb for morning, luncheon, cocktails, dinner and evening. To judge by the volume of applause, it was evident that women could look smart on the beach, at the races, around a bridge table, at the dance or in an embassy garden without silk.

The mannequins included Mrs. Lee Simonson, Mrs. Peter Seitz, Mrs. Edward Salner, Miss Patricia Lawrence, Miss Mary Tyler McCormack, Mrs. Livingston Hartley, Miss Frida Frazer, Miss Luz Iglesias, Mrs. Herbert Stratford, Mrs. Benjamin Gould, Mrs. David Kreeger, Miss Martha Schoenfeld, Miss Madeline Cotter, Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Miss Betty Emerson, Mrs. Joseph Paul Marshall, Miss Mary Betty Maxwell, Miss Anita Ramirez, Miss Helena Day, Mrs. Jay du Von, Mrs. Angus Roy Shannon, Mrs. Margaret di Rosa, Mrs. Helen Baldwin, Mrs. John R. Curry, Mrs. Sydney L. Manson, jr., Mrs. Benjamin Thoron, Mrs. Robert Eicholz and Mrs. Paul Sturges.

Dodd Reviews Situation.

At the conclusion of "Life Without Silk," Dodd reviewed the situation abroad and observed:

"If we applied a boycott on oil, gas and other war stuffs that have been going to Japan it would not be three months, in my judgment, before China would be safe, and that would improve world conditions immensely."

The one means of escaping a world conflict, he said, is for all democratic nations to join with one another in economic cooperation.

On other fronts, too, the boycott controversy raged.

Eugene Schachner, editor of "China Today," published in New York by the American Friends of the Chinese People, charged Japanese money was behind yesterday's "Save Our Jobs" parade. He asserted the Tokyo government imposed a tax on every bale of raw silk shipped out of the country, funds thus collected going to silk manufacturers in the United States to fight the anti-Japanese boycott.

Meanwhile it was announced here that labor leaders and manufacturers in the American silk industry had formed a joint council to combat the boycott. Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, has been named chairman.

Two New Bridges Planned for Falls

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP).—Engineers tonight planned two new archways linking Canada and the United States in full view of the falls, while the famous Falls View Bridge lay a heap of twisted steel, across the bottom of the ice-choked Niagara gorge.

While International Railway Co. officials announced decision to replace the ruined "Honeymoon Bridge" immediately, T. B. McQuestien, minister of highways for Ontario, said another bridge was planned by Ontario Province and New York State about 1,000 feet down stream from the Falls View site.

Shapely Pros and Cons of the Silk versus Cotton Debate

Associated Press Photos.

Working girls with silk-clad legs and debutantes with hose of cotton are likely to stir strong debate on the merits of a boycott against Japan. The working girls (upper) are Philadelphia silk hosiery workers who took time out from a "save our jobs" parade to display their silken appendages. They fear a boycott against Japan will cost them their jobs by curtailing demand for silk hosiery. The debutantes (lower) are Patricia Lawrence (right) and Betty Emerson, who modeled cotton hosiery in the Washington League for Women Shoppers fashion parade, "Life Without Silk," in a drive to boycott Japanese silk. The workers paraded while the league conducted its show.

Chinese Reach Tsining Gates in New Offensive

Terrorists Hurl Bombs in Shanghai; 'Puppet' Police Beat Briton.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Jan. 29.—Reinforced Chinese troops, smashing against extended Japanese lines in North China in a new offensive, reported today they had reached the south gates of Tsining.

Chinese terrorists in Shanghai celebrated the sixth anniversary of the first Shanghai war by hurling bombs at the Japanese consulate general, the Japanese censors' office and the pro-Japanese "great way" municipal government's police office. One Chinese was injured and damage was slight.

J. M. Leeming, Canadian-born member of the Shanghai municipal police, was beaten by police members of the Chinese "puppet" government of Shanghai when he tried to make an arrest. The incident was the latest of a series involving Britons and added to British-Japanese tension. A protest was expected.

Huge Armies Close In.

Huge armies were reported closing in on each other on the extended North China front, where bloody fighting has been raging for weeks north and south of Suchow, at the intersection of the Tientsin-Pukow and Lunhai railways.

Chinese troops, ordered by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to regain territory lost by the defection of Han Fu-chu, who was executed in Hankow this week, struck back at the Japanese and began an encircling movement around Tsining.

West Coast Thief Calls Bridges Red

Los Angeles, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Arthur Kent, the "Red Robin Hood" who told of burglarizing wealthy homes and contributing loot to the Communist Party, alleged today in an affidavit that Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, and Lionel Stander, screen actor, were members of the Communist Party.

Although Communist spokesmen have disavowed Kent's party allegiance, or his claims of financial support, the confessed burgler insisted the party had "stolen" furs and jewelry and turned them into cash.

His charges were embodied in his application for probation on the burglary charge.

Madrid Willing to Cease Raids On Peaceful Cities if Foes Do

By the Associated Press.

Barcelona (Saturday), January 29.—The ministry of defense today declared the government would cease bombing cities outside combat areas if the insurgents would agree to do so.

A communique said the "government will be willing to consider any initiative tending to mutual agreement to cast aside such warfare, which besides shedding innocent blood accelerates the ruin of Spain."

It reported government planes bombed Oropesa, Talavera and Salamanca yesterday in reprisal for the last insurgent bombing of Valencia two days ago.

The only efficient way to oppose air attacks, the statement continued, is to use "the same methods used by the enemy, but if possible with more formidable intensity; to use terror against terror."

Meanwhile, government sources said the insurgents were limiting their activities to defensive measures on the Teruel front, where government forces had launched a new offensive.

These sources reported several insurgent companies had been surrounded near Celadas, north of Teruel, and that government troops were pressing toward the Teruel-Calatyud highway, trying to cut communication lines.

A high army officer said:

"We captured Teruel by forcing the enemy to fight where we wished, thereby disorganizing the offensive which they were preparing to launch north of Guadalajara. They launched an undeniably fearful counter-offensive, but failed to recapture Teruel.

"Now we are again on the offensive and we are paralyzing their counter-offensive north of Teruel. They will have to fight again where it is most convenient for us."

2 Bandits Guilty Of Murder, Face 30 Years to Life

John Henry Joseph and James Booth, both colored, were convicted in the second degree murder of William Edmonds, colored, yesterday in District Court. He was fatally shot in the holdup of a chain grocery store on Ninth street northwest in 1935.

Edmonds walked in the store while the two bandits were menacing Gilbert J. Cronies, manager, who was so badly beaten he remained in the hospital for three months. One of the pair shot at Edmonds.

Delores Garcia, colored, who accompanied the two bandits and later confessed was indicted with the others but was permitted to plead guilty of manslaughter.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue postponed sentence until he has had a chance to study the prior records of both Joseph and Booth.

15 Are Seized In Plot to Kill Greek Dictator

Metaxas Mobilizes Army Against Exiled Leaders of Parliament.

By the Associated Press.

Athens, Jan. 28.—Fifteen persons were arrested tonight as participants in what police described as a plot aginst the life of Greece's "strong man," Premier Gen. John Metaxas.

Meanwhile the Greek army was reported mobilized to put down possible disturbances growing out of the mass exile of leading opponents of the dictatorial government of Gen. Metaxas.

Private advices from Athens said Metaxas had arrested all former leaders of Parliament and sent them to remote islands. Metaxas warned: "The dictatorial regime abandons its previous measures and enters upon a new period—a period of severity without any pity . . . If necessary, other and even more severe measures will be taken."

The government statement, published in the controlled Greek press, said old parties "refused to let bygones be bygones" and "allied themselves with various criminal elements which stir up unrest as a profession."

The situation apparently came to a head when opposition leaders united in a manifesto assailing the government's financial and domestic policies and calling on the people to demand restoration of their sovereign rights.

Miners Put Off 3d Term Move For Roosevelt

Proposals Are Deferred Until 1940 Meeting by Delegates.

Consideration of proposals that the United Mine Workers support President Roosevelt for a third term was deferred until they meet again in 1940 by the United Mine Workers, in session at the Rialto Theater late yesterday.

The delegates, however, unanimously adopted a resolution supporting the President and praising his legislative program. Progress already made in improving the lot of the workers was emphasized in the resolution, which asserted that "President Roosevelt has led the American people in their struggle for an increasing share in the benefits of our culture and civilization."

Affirm Faith in Roosevelt.

"The United Mine Workers herewith affirm their faith and belief in the leadership of President Roosevelt," the resolution stated.

"They dedicate their organization to the maintenance and extension of President Roosevelt's program, so that its benefits may be enjoyed by ourselves and our children, and to the continued struggle under his leadership against the ruthless and selfish opposition of reactionary interests."

Suggestion that a third-term move be deferred came in a separate resolution, which represented six or more resolutions referred to a special committee earlier in the week.

National officers of the union, headed by John L. Lewis, president of the Committee for Industrial Organization and the miners' chief, were directed to accept increases in salary, voted them in 1936, but never taken.

Under the new scale, Lewis' salary would be increased from $12,000 to $25,000. Comparable increases would go to three other officers. Yesterday's action called for retroactive increases from the time of their approval in 1936.

Resolutions condemning the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Chicago Police Department, Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio, and four independent steel companies were adopted.

Officials Condemned.

Resolutions also were adopted condemning Mayor Dan Shields, of Johnstown, Pa.; Sheriff Ralph Elser, of Youngstown, Ohio, "and other local and State officials who similarly supported the vicious and reactionary activities of the steel companies."

The miners called for a broader social security act, which would benefit workers in "as dangerous a field as ours."

Several speakers emphasized the fact that by the time most miners reached the age of 55 they no longer were able to mine for coal. They pointed out their "hazards" and suggested some more adequate form of compensation in case of disability.

Silence of Federal and State officials during last summer's "little steel strike" was called a "gravely disturbing omen" by the convention.

Referring to the D. A. R. as "an instrument for reactionary and selfish interests," the resolution said the patriotic group was composed of "rich and idle ladies."

The resolution condemning the D. A. R. had its origin in the feud which originated when the former refused to rent their hall for the convention this year. It was held there in 1936.

Shouts of approval and long applause filled the packed auditorium, blue with smoke, as the miners unanimously supported Lewis' proposal to keep the National Guard out of labor disputes.

Legislation Sought.

Lewis said he would ask Congress to enact legislation to withdraw Federal funds from any state guard called out for use in a strike. The convention also approved Lewis' proposal for legislation prohibiting the Government from purchasing anything from any employer cited by the National Labor Relations Board for violation of the Wagner Labor Disputes Act.

Miners delivered bitter speeches against the record of the National Guard in some labor disputes and against the Bethlehem Steel Co., Philip Murray, vice president of the mine workers, said, employed "chiseling tactics" in obtaining Federal contracts.

Murray charged Bethlehem with non-compliance with the labor relations law.

"This," he said, "enabled it to 'chisel' wages, submit lower bids and obtain more Government business than any other single company."

Bethlehem was one of the independent bloc which refused to bargain or sign contracts with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, affiliate of the C. I. O.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, will introduce amendments to the Walsh-Healy public contracts act to force guarantees of compliance with the labor relations law in public building, it was announced.

Particularly bitter yesterday was the report on the National Guard. It recalled that at least 100 workers had been killed by guardsmen since 1877.

Use of the National Guard in this way, the report said, "has not diminished but increased in recent times."

Green to Fight To Keep Card in Miners' Union

A.F.L. Head 'Hopes' to Defend Himself Before Lewis' Convention.

By the United Press.

Miami, Jan. 28.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today he hopes to appear before the United Mine Workers convention in Washington and personally defend himself against those seeking to deprive him of membership in John L. Lewis' union.

Simultaneously, Green struck out at the leadership of the U. M. W. A., in which he has held a membership card for four decades, and said it was forcing the miners to act as "financial angel" of the Committee for Industrial Organization. He pointed out the union's members constitute, in his mind, the only dues-paying support of the C. I. O., and said:

"I think the union could be classified as the holding company of the C. I. O."

A. F. L. Has Rival Union.

Green did not explain why he is so anxious to retain membership in the Lewis-led union, largest in the Nation. The A. F. of L. has a rival affiliate in the coal fields—the Progressive Miners of America.

He attacked the leadership of the International Typographical Union, comprising 80,000 members, still part of the federation. They are not paying the additional 1 cent a month a member assessment ordered by the A. F. of L. Charles P. Howard, president of the I. T. U., is secretary of the C. I. O. Relations between the typographers and the A. F. of L. appear to be nearing the breaking point.

Arms Program Backed.

Today's developments, concurrent with a meeting of the federation executive council, covered a wide range of subjects, including:

1. A call by Green for national support of President Roosevelt's armament program on grounds that "we must rely on the judgment of the Chief Executive."

2. Request by the council that Congress defeat the conference report on the Administration's housing bill and change it to include the Lodge amendment calling for a guaranteed prevailing wage to building workers.

3. Detailed analysis of the United Mine Workers' auditors' report, made public in Washington, bringing the council to the conclusion that there are virtually no dues-paying members in the C. I. O. save for the miners, that "that's the answer to why one man rules the C. I. O."

2-Alarm Blaze Razes Office of D. C. Ship Firm

Excursion Boat Potomac Periled; Fireman Hurt When Ax Slips.

A two-alarm fire threatened the moonlight excursion steamer S. S. Potomac at its wharf last night and destroyed the offices and storehouse of the ship company. A pet cat named "Snuff" was burned to death.

Smoke from burning ship supplies and the frame building billowed over Southwest Washington before six engines and two trucks under Deputy Chief John Carrington extinguished the blaze.

H. F. Burroughs, traffic manager of the Potomac River Lines, Inc., which owns the old steamboat and the Robert E. Lee, said the building was a total loss, but could not estimate the damage.

The fire was discovered by George Hunt, an employe of the company, who lived in the frame structure. He and Phil Brown, who was reading downstairs, turned in the alarm.

Private W. A. Heflin, No. 10 Truck Company, was cut on the face when an ax slipped from another firefighter.

The building was owned by the District government and rented by the steamship company for offices and a storehouse. Clouds of feathers joined smoke clouds as firemen threw out of windows smoldering pillows, mattresses, life preservers and blankets.

Burroughs said the most valuable thing damaged might prove to be a 50-year-old oil painting called "Yoquevido," of a fisherwoman, which had graced the old vessel for years.

Church of the New Jerusalem Observing Swedenborg's Birth

Week's Celebration by Washington Society to Be Culminated Today in Honor of Swedish Scientist and Theologian.

The National Church of the General Convention of the New Jerusalem today culminates a week's celebration of the 250th anniversary of the birth of Emanuel Swedenborg, January 29, 1688.

Founded on the principles of the Swedish scientist and theologian, the Washington Society of the New Jerusalem was organized in 1846. Its first church, built on North Capitol street 80 years ago, was destroyed by fire February 9, 1889. Almost immediately after the disaster, plans were undertaken for the National Church, which was erected in 1894-95.

The Church of the Holy City, designed by the late H. Langford Warren, professor of architecture at Harvard, is considered one of the outstanding examples of the Gothic style in Washington.

Set off by a lofty gray stone tower, the structure—at Sixteenth and Corcoran streets northwest—presents a distinguished appearance. Rich carving decorates the doors, windows and waterspouts.

Within, the semicircular chancel, arched in stone, is lighted by seven windows depicting the angels of the seven churches of the Book of Revelation. These complete a series that begins with the Old Testament in the Creation window at the west end and continues through the Gospel and Transfiguration windows of the transepts.

The three-story parish hall, where open house will be held today in celebration of Swedenborg's birth, contains a Sunday school, library, kitchen, dining room, etc.

Only three ministries cover most of the history of the Washington Society. The Rev. Jabez Fox (c. 1857-86), known as "a vigorous missionary through pulpit and press," was succeeded after a short interval by the Rev. Frank Sewall (1889-1915), former president of Urbana University and active in development of plans for the present church. Coming to the pulpit here in 1915, the Rev. Paul Sperry, present minister, has held high offices in the General Convention of the church.

"Irresistible Force"

By Dr. Simpson B. Daugherty,
Pastor, Memorial United Brethren Church.

Dr. Daugherty.

"For We cannot but speak the things which we saw and heard" Acts 4:20. Sometimes men do things because they cannot help it. An irresistible force has taken hold upon them and they are dominated by it. Some men must fly, others must sail the seas, or be making money, some must seek the far away places. Strange forces drive us all. Byrd and Edison, Lindbergh and Steinmetz, Bach and Lincoln, all those in the past who have written their names in fire across the skies have been driven by that irresistible passion within them to make the most of life in their chosen field of endeavor.

We are marvelously made. We have the ablity to do or resist the will of God. He has given us freedom of will—we do, or do not, as we choose. Which puts the destinies of eternity in our hands.

A beautiful story is before us. Two disciples had gone up to the temple to pray. At the temple gate sat a man who had never walked from his birth. He was a beggar and stretched out his hands for an alms. Peter looked upon him and said, "I have neither silver nor gold, nevertheless, I give." His hope and faith and love had a resurrection that day. The epitome of this disciple's life was to give, and while he had no money, he gave that irresistible force that transformed the drab, unromatic path of this parasite into the highway that led to the glory of the thrilling experience of "walking, leaping, and praising God."

Someone always objects to that power that lifts life above and beyond the obvious, and as a result of their ministry of compassion, Peter and John were arrested and commanded not to preach in the name of the Master. They replied in those immortal words, "Whether it is right in the sight of God to hearken unto you rather than unto God, judge ye; for we cannot but speak the things which we saw and heard."

We see and hear much today that tends to poison the fountain of life. Plans and platitudes rise before us, panaceas and patents promise us the Paradise from pain. In a little while only to be ground to powder by the trip-hammer of time and we are left to suffer with hot heads and cold hearts. And all about us we hear complaint.

But there is a power that comes from God that makes our testimony irresistible. And from that place where our souls keep worshipful tryst with Him we can go forth under the mystic spell of an overmastering passion to touch stunned and dismayed humanity with that living, vital, triumphant faith that will turn complaining into proclamning, and with a cool head and a hot heart, we shall relight the candle of a new confidence that shall grip us and set us afire for God and righteousness to make us an irresistible force in turning this swinging cemetery of dead hopes into the abiding place of the Prince of Peace.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night." (Revelation 12:10.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "A louder song, sweeter than has ever before reached high heaven, now rises clearer and nearer to the great heart of Christ; for the accuser is not there and Love sends forth her primal and everlasting strain."

Capital Fetes President at Balls Tonight

Ball

rangement enabling them to pay for their tickets Monday.

While the Capital, as the home of the President and focal point of the paralysis fight, plays its part in celebration of the Executive's birthday, hundreds of other communities throughout the Nation will act tonight on the slogan, "You Dance. He'll Walk."

A total of 15,000 separate events have been scheduled in connection with the birthday campaign, it was estimated yesterday.

In New York City the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, will be the guest of honor at the party to be given in the Waldorf Astoria.

The entertainment will include personal appearances by a galaxy of radio, stage, screen and opera stars, music by 14 dance orchestras, a military drill and lighting of the President's birthday cake by Oscar, celebrated maitre d'hotel.

Two States—Georgia and New Mexico—have declared the day a public holiday.

Broadcast Arranged.

The President will express his appreciation to the Nation for its part in the campaign against infantile paralysis in a broadcast over the Columbia and National hookups at 11:30 p. m. The broadcast will then shift from the White House to the Mayflower Hotel, where one of the birthday balls will be in progress.

Earlier in the day the four movie stars arriving in Washington are scheduled to broadcast from the Union Station at 8:45 a. m., after being greeted by Richmond B. Keech, executive vice chairman of the President's birthday celebration committee, and Earl A. Nash, chairman of the publicity committee.

The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Police and Fire departments will join forces tonight, Keech announced, to control crowds at the "birthday ball" hotels and insure every spectator an opportunity to see Mrs. Roosevelt and the visiting stars as they arrive.

Other Affairs Arranged.

Besides the balls scheduled for the seven hotels, several other functions are planned tonight to aid the paralysis foundation.

More than 1,800 are expected tonight to attend the birthday ball at Buchanan Community Center, Thirteenth and D streets northwest. The Y. M. C. A. will open its regular Saturday night dance to the public and turn over the entire proceeds to the fund. A perforcance of "The Distaff Side" will be given in aid of the same cause at the Government Printing Office.

Celebration of the President's birthday by Mr. Roosevelt himself will begin with a stag party in the White House for 20 members of the "Cuff Link Club," men who have been intimately associated with the President in the 1936 and 1932 campaigns, as well as in the days when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Although the President will not actually be 56 until tomorrow, he and Mrs. Roosevelt will sit down to a birthday dinner tonight.

The White House yesterday morning was flooded with 30,000 letters containing dimes for the fight against paralysis.

Arriving in the first delivery, the donations had to be separated from official mail before normal office routine could begin.

Eddie Cantor, Don Ameche, Bing Crosby and other radio stars started the "March of Dimes" movement by urging all their listeners to send 10 cents to the President to supplement funds raised by the birthday balls.

Yesterday's surge of contributions brought to 80,000 the total number of coins which have been mailed direct to the President for the national foundation. Hundreds of letters have contained currency and checks, which, with the coins, will be turned over to the local committee, headed by Commissioner George E. Allen.

Stars Visit Hospital.

Meanwhile the visting stage and screen stars yesterday followed a schedule of public appearances as exacting as any day "on location."

Eleanor Powell and Ray Bolger delighted tiny patients at Children's Hospital with a dance routine, before rushing to the District Building for an official reception from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Loew's theaters entertained the full complement of visiting theatrical celebrities with a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel, while in the afternoon Representative Virginia E. Jenckes (Democrat), of Indiana, received the group at her home.

An official dinner at the Shoreham, given by Commissioner Hazen, was followed by a tour of the Department of Justice, with J. Edgar Hoover serving as guide.

The Hollywood and New York entertainers who are contributing their presence to tonight's Birthday Balls will be luncheon guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House today.

The Community Center Department last night sponsored a dance for young people at the Ben Murch School, Thirty-sixth and Ellicott streets northwest, will all the proceeds turned over to the paralysis fund. The senior class of the Alice Deal Junior High School designated the affair as their graduation party.

An appeal for support of the paralysis foundation was voiced by Elwood Seal, corporation counsel, in speech yesterday afternoon before 2,000 delegates to the United Mine Workers convention.

Speaking over a Nation-wide hook-up of the three major broadcasting systems, Frank R. McNinch, FCC chairman, described infantile paralysis as "a problem of national concern and of great moment to every citizen, since no community is immune."

An effective attack on the plague, he declared, can be carried out only "through a Nation-wide, organized and scientific handling of the problem such as is planned by the foundation."

Dancing to 2 a. m.

Another radio appeal for attendance at the Birthday Balls was contained in a poem written by Joe Holman, local sports figure, and read by Arthur Godfrey over WJSV.

A final invitation to the city to support the various benefit functions will be heard at 6:30 p. m. today on a broadcast in which all the visiting stars will participate.

Committee officials emphasized last night that a $2.50 ticket entitles the holder to admission to any or all of the seven hotels holding birthday balls, and that the entire party of stage and screen notables, accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, will visit each hotel during the evening. Dancing will continue from 9 p. m. to 2 a. m.

More than 30 special entertainments have been scheduled for the hotels, other than those ordinarily billed. Glen Gray and his Casa Loma Orchestra will play at the Mayflower, while Happy Walker has been booked for the Washington. At the Shoreham, Hamilton, Raleigh, Willard and Wardman Park the regular hotel bands will perform.

With the exception of the Shoreham and Raleigh, none of the hotels is accepting dinner reservations for tonight.

Fredric Marches Here for Dances

Fredric March, Hollywood star, and Mrs. March arrived in the Capital last night for appearances at the President's Birthday celebrations tonight. They are shown at their arrival.

Among the notables of the screen and stage in Washington for the series of President's Birthday Balls tonight are Vera Zorina (left), former prima ballerina of the Ballet Russe soon to make her screen debut; Eleanor Powell, of Hollywood, and Marcia Gambarelli, New York ballet star. They are shown as they were greeted at the District Building by District of Columbia Commissioners.

Harris & Ewing.

Ammunition in the form of dimes for the national battle against infantile paralysis is pouring into White House offices by the tens of thousands. Thirty thousand dimes arrived in the first mail alone yesterday. Official mail was nearly forgotten as Miss Margaret Lehand, personal secretary to President Roosevelt, opened the envelopes. She holds a dime aloft.

Prevailing Wages Demanded by AFL

Miami, Fla., Jan. 28 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor today called for restoration to the housing bill of the Lodge amendment providing for the payment of prevailing wages.

A Senate bill provided the prevailing rate in each locality should be paid on housing projects, but the amendment was eliminated in conference. The executive council directed a telegram to Senator Wagner urging that the Senate insist on the provision.

Policeman Freed In Fatal Shooting

Policeman Herbert B. Hebb was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday in the fatal shooting Wednesday night of Marcellus Brown, 23, colored, former convict.

In a second decision, Abraham Rubin, 25, a messenger boy, officially was called an accidental traffic victim, and the driver of the car which hit him was exonerated. Rubin died Thursday in Sibley Hospital, three hours after an accident at First and Pierce streets northeast.

ment" of an enlisted reserve for the Army;

$6,080,000 for manufacture of gauges, dies and other aids to the manufacture of Army material, $5,000,000 of this sum to be spent during the fiscal year 1939;

$2,000,000 to make up deficiencies in Army ammunition.

He further asked a flat 20 per cent increase in the existing Naval building program; authorization and appropriation to lay down two additional battleships and two additional cruisers during the calendar year 1938, and $15,000,000 for experimental vessels.

He also asked enactment of legislation "aimed at the prevention of profiteering in time of war and equalization of the burdens of possible war."

Nearly a dozen bills to this effect are now before Congress. On some of them, hearings have been held. Most of them are similar to a measure introduced last year by Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, which would ban war profits by sweeping tax revision; create an industrial management board, and control commodities, finances and resources.

While the President's message asked immediate beginning of two additional battleships and two cruisers, the Vinson bill would authorize the expenditure of $800,000,000 to begin work on:

Three battleships, at 35,000 tons each.

Two aircraft carriers, at 15,000 tons each.

Eight cruisers, totaling 68,754 tons.

Twenty-five destroyers, totaling 38,000 tons.

Nine submarines, totaling 13,658 tons.

Three submarine tenders, totaling 27,000 tons.

Five destroyer tenders, totaling 45,000 tons.

Four seaplane tenders, totaling 33,200 tons.

Seven small seaplane tenders, totaling 11,550 tons.

The over-all total is 69 ships at a gross tonnage of 400,662.

The experimental vessels most likely to be constructed under the $15,000,000 authorization will be the small, deadly "suicide boats," Naval officials indicated last night. These are the tiny, wasplike torpedo-loaded vessels, about 40 feet in length, capable of 35 knots and more, similar to, though larger than, the skittering "sea-sleds" which Great Britain used with such deadly effect during the World War.

The battleships asked for are in addition to the huge new North Carolina and Washington now on the ways, and to the two additional battleships authorized in the 1939 naval appropriation bill, which has passed the House and waits Senate action. The total authorized new battleships, building and to be built, are seven, if the Vinson bill passes without amendment. This country now has 15 capital ships under age under the 1936 London Treaty.

Upon completion of the Vinson program, the United States will have 22 battleships (four over age), 8 aircraft carriers, 47 cruisers, 147 destroyers, 58 submarines, and more than 3,000 first-line fighting planes.

Vinson declared at the Capitol that an increase in man power of 1,200 officers and 20,000 enlisted men will be necessary to keep pace with the building program.

In the Senate, Chairman David I. Walsh, Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, expressed "full accord with the message."

At the House hearings Monday, Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, will be the first witness.

In the international armament picture, the United States Navy trails Great Britain, but will definitely top Japan and other sea powers.

The immediate program of six battleships, with one to come, will not touch Great Britain's program of five already building and five projected.

N. Y. Legislature Omits Roosevelt Birthday Greeting

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP).—Each year since 1932, when Franklin D. Roosevelt quit being Governor of New York State and began being President of the United States, the State Legislature has sent him congratulations on January 30.

On Sunday Mr. Roosevelt will have another birthday, but no resolution of felicitation from the law makers.

Does America Think Tom Mooney Guilty?

Twenty-one years ago Tom Mooney was convicted for the Preparedness Parade bombing and he has been in jail ever since fighting for his complete freedom. The Gallup Poll found that the agitation over Mooney does not cease. It asked voters in every part of the country whether they thought Tom Mooney was guilty? A special poll was made of California. Five Governors have refused to pardon him. What does America think?

Lunatic Murders Studied as Eight Deaths Are Bared

Boston, Jan. 28.—Investigators tonight demanded records of more than 400 Massachusetts Mental Hospital inmates who died of other than natural causes in the past ten years, as a mounting toll of insane slayings rose to eight.

State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley disclosed Edward M. Southern, of Malden, died last December 29 after he had been choked by another inmate.

Buckley said the medical examiner's report gave cause of death as "bronchial pneumonia following an accident."

The killings by madmen, who ran amuck with weapons ranging from a pickaxe to fists, came to light with a double slaying at Medfield State Hospital, where five violent deaths have been uncovered.

The probe became State-wide today with revelation of three killings at Danvers State Hospital.

cepted, the District would be exempted from any contribution to the development costs.]

In addition, Straus' recommendations would enable the ADA to operate anywhere in the District instead of merely on slum sites.

Under present legislation, the Alley Dwelling Authority operates as a unique branch of the Federal Government. Distinct from all other local housing authorities, it receives, according to a special provision of the Wagner-Steagall act, such sums as the President may allocate to it from the general funds appropriated for the United States Housing Authority as a whole.

Ihlder stated last night "As a result of the conference of the Alley Dwelling Authority with the United States Housing Authority this afternoon, the counsel of the ADA will sit in with their counsel to study their proposals. These proposals will then be considered by the ADA. We have not committed ourselves on them."

He stated that he was unable to tell where the new projects, made possible by the $1,000,000 grant, would be located. "We have a program of 14 projects," he said, "and we will take the new ones out of that list."

Adding that some, at least, of the new developments would not be confined to mere slum-clearance, Ihlder said that a certain amount of actual house-building will "probably" result from the expected Congressional appropriation.

Smallpox Cases Diminish in U. S.

The U. S. Public Health Service yesterday reported a falling off in smallpox cases throughout the country, though they are still abnormally high in number.

For the Nation at large, 563 new cases were recorded during the week ended January 22, compared to 727 the previous week. During the third week of January last year, however, only 278 new cases occurred.

The disease at the present time is most prevalent in Missouri, Iowa, Idaho, Indiana and Illinois.

Hot U. S. Protest Sent Tokyo on Blow at Attache

ner. At no time did either Mr. Riggs or myself touch a Japanese soldier nor did we speak to any except the gendarmes with us."

Allison said he subsequently protested to the Japanese embassy in Nanking but did not get a sympathetic hearing, a "Mr. Fukui" asserting the Japanese soldier was "seemingly within his right in slapping us." He said he retorted "there could be no excuse for the slapping and that I would expect a call from the military to explain the matter." Fukui replied he would report the incident to the military authorities.

The next day, according to Allison's report, Major Hongo of the Japanese Embassy called on him and "on behalf of the commander of the Japanese forces expressed regret for the incident and offered apologies." Major Hongo was reported as stating "a strict investigation was being made of the unit responsible and that while this unit's departure from Nanking had been scheduled for today it was being kept here for several days to complete the investigation."

[In Shanghai, the Associated Press reported, a Japanese army spokesman said the soldier who hit Allison would not be punished, as he was "only doing his duty." Japanese authorities, the spokesman added, were taking a serious view of Allison's "insolent attitude."

[It was learned, the Associated Press added, that two high-ranking Japanese staff officers were flying from Tokyo to Nanking to investigate the American charges. Shinrokuro Hidaka, Japan's acting ambassador to China, also left to make a five-day investigation in Nanking.—Editor's note.]

Allison "Astounded."

In a second report to the department, received yesterday, Allison said he was "astounded to hear over the radio" that according to the official Japanese version of the incident "I had refused to leave the premises when the Japanese soldier challenged me and that I had insulted the Japanese military officer." He reiterated his original statements regarding the first of these allegations and denied the second, asserting Maj. Hongo "mentioned no such thing when he called to apologize yesterday morning."

The State Department indicated it fully intended to support Allison. In announcing that instructions had gone forward to have the matter laid before the Japanese government, the department in a statement paid tribute to his faithful performance of duty and asserted that despite a difficult task, "there has at no time been in any of the many reports which the department has been receiving from China any indication that Mr. Allison has at any time been lacking in judgment or acted with indiscretion."

"It has received several reports indicating he has had the confidence and the co-operation of his Japanese official associates," the statement continued, adding Allison had lived in Japan and speaks Japanese.

The State Department explained that before the Japanese military forces took Nanking all American nationals who could be induced to do so, including the embassy staff, withdrew from that city but that 18 American nationals, most of them missionaries, doctors, nurses or teachers, elected to remain.

The People Speak Up.

Two new forums add their dates to the Capital's crowded calendar. And though quiet fireside moments are already more scarce in Washington than in any other city of the country, what with debates and addresses ringing almost nightly from some rostrum, both ventures deserve notice.

Tomorrow afternoon a group comprising mainly Government officers invites the public to participate in the opening of what they call their "Modern Forum." Protesting loudly that there is "not a stuffed shirt in the series," they lead off with Sherwood Eddy and follow with others deemed competent to focus "a social microscope for current conflicts."

With the similar ambition of provoking thought on current social problems, though confining itself largely to Washington speakers, the night school department of the public school system opens another forum on Monday evening. Divided into two parts, one series of meetings will consider personal and community interests, while another will concentrate on the national aspects of citizenship.

Both new programs place large emphasis on discussion by the audience of the speaker's points following his formal remarks. This is in line with the interesting change in the peculiarly American appetite for being lectured. No longer are the people content to sit and be told. The public forum has taught them how to challenge.

Auditoriums are resounding with those disarming overtures, "That's a splendid question," and "I'm glad you brought that up," or else the damaging confession, "My statement was of course a broad generalization." Men and women are rising on all sides to demand, "Would the speaker agree that . . ." If the speaker doesn't, it is plain he should.

The spectacle furnishes more than entertainment. In the high level of intelligence displayed by the majority of questions and in the readiness of the citizen to raise his voice unabashed in the midst of a thousand people there is encouraging evidence of the health and vigor of democracy.

A Leafless Olive Branch.

The latest proposal of John L. Lewis for restoration of peace between the rival labor factions seems an adroit move to put the A. F. of L. on the defensive. But it does not appear to enhance the possibility of an agreement in any significant respect.

On its face, Mr. Lewis' dramatic offer to march the C. I. O., "horse, foot and dragoons," into the American Federation of Labor camp on February 1 may seem to involve a real concession. But as a condition to this reunion he asks the A. F. of L. to issue charters to all C. I. O. units and then call a convention to settle all differences. The result would probably not be a mutually satisfactory agreement, but a concentration of the quarrel on the federation's doorstep.

Present indications are that the A. F. of L. would be glad to welcome back the unions previously expelled for affiliation with the C. I. O. But since the split took place the latter organization has set up a number of rival unions in industries where the A. F. of L. had granted exclusive organizing privileges to its own affiliates.

For example, the two national organizations are now supporting antagonistic unions of seamen and of street railway employes. Obviously, the A. F. of L. could not welcome C. I. O. seamen and street railway employe groups into its ranks without showing bad faith to its own member unions. There is a question, too, as to the legality of such a course under the A. F. of L. constitution.

Consolidation of these rival unions is the chief obstacle to an agreement between the parent organizations. Unless the problem can be solved a merger between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. might easily produce more friction than it would relieve. Realizing that fact, negotiators for the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. agreed several weeks ago to assign such conflicts to sub-committees within each industry where dual unionism exists. A general reunion would then have been effected on the basis of resulting local agreements.

It was Mr. Lewis himself who upset that reasonable approach. Since his arbitrary conduct has recently brought criticism from two of his outstanding lieutenants, he undoubtedly feels the need of making some gesture to recoup prestige. But something more persuasive than his present offer will be required.

The Van Zeeland Report.

Official and unofficial reports dealing with the nature and causes of the barriers to international trade leave little new to be said on the subject. There is probably no line of current economic investigation which has been explored more thoroughly or more competently by experts. Hence, when the former Premier of Belgium, Paul Van Zeeland, was asked by France and Great Britain to study proposals for elimination of obstacles to international trade, his task was chiefly that of appraising the relative merits and practicability of suggestions that have been often debated.

That part of his report which deals with the economic and financial factors obstructing trade, such as unduly high tariffs, import quotas, unstable currencies, restricted capital movements and exchange-control systems, covers familiar ground. There is, however, a heightened perception of the impracticability of radical or sudden changes which would disrupt existing economic relationships. Thus a sweeping general reduction of tariff duties is regarded as beyond the range of immediate possibilities. Approval, however, is given to modest bilateral agreements of the type concluded by Secretary Hull.

In discussing purely financial as opposed to economic obstructions to trade, Mr. Van Zeeland is also content with proposed interim solutions of monetary problems. Realizing the impracticability of any immediate restoration of the international gold standard, he therefore urges an extension of the tripartite monetary pact. These and other suggestions for restoring a freer flow of capital between countries are, as Mr. Van Zeeland realizes, not feasible so long as the economic disequilibrium which accounts for the erection of trade barriers exists.

To create the conditions that would make nations willing to sacrifice existing protective controls for the sake of long-range gain is the problem. Everybody agrees that collaboration is essential if trade barriers are to be lowered. But, as the report points out, nobody is willing to commit his country in advance to any specific course of action. To add to the difficulty, remedial action along one or two lines is not sufficient. There must be an attack on many fronts by countries acting separately and in concert.

Even if purely economic obstacles to accord constituted the sole deterrent to effective collaboration, the difficulties would be tremendous. Indeed, Mr. Van Zeeland confesses that "reasons to hope for a rapid and cordial rapprochement appear slighter than at any moment since 1918."

This is because the economic factors are much less formidable than the political obstacles to accord growing out of the desire of authoritarian states to achieve a large measure of economic self-sufficiency. Mr. Van Zeeland's recognition of the increasing importance of these tendencies leads him to summarize certain recommendations for improved distribution of raw materials and solution of the colonial problem.

In spite of the excellence of the Van Zeeland report as an economic document, it is difficult to believe that it affords a practical basis for immediate co-operation along the lines suggested between the leading Fascist states of Europe and the democratic governments of France, Great Britain, and the United States.

Beauty In Our Path.

Nature lovers ever long for sylvan scenes where beauty unadorned by advertisement may please the eye and soothe the nervous system. To roll along a rural road unencumbered by lurid boardings is pleasure unalloyed.

But the world is full of all kinds of people—farmers who can't meet their mortgage payments and leave their houses unpainted and their barns unwhitewashed; automobilists who require gasoline and desire hot dogs; county commissioners who lack the cash to keep the roads and bridges in repair; advertisers whose aim is to smite the optic nerve. In consequence the nature lover is affrighted, his eyes offended, his soul seared. And many realize that something ought to be done about it.

Prominent among them may be listed the Associated Clubs of Virginia for Roadside Development. This organization has sponsored a bill, now before the General Assembly in Richmond, requiring billboard companies to pay a modest State license fee and a small annual permit charge for each sign erected along the highways outside cities and towns. The measure exempts no less than fifteen classes of signs, such as real estate for sale or rent, and certainly cannot be called drastic. In other words, the suggested nuptials of Aesthetics and Commercialism have all the earmarks of a marriage of convenience. But there is no suggestion here that the marriage is other than right and proper.

The eight members of the House of Delegates offering the measure hope that its effect will be "to eliminate the snipe signs on trees and fences that now litter our otherwise beautiful roads."

"Snipe signs," one surmises, are the ugly little rascals that shoot at you unexpectedly and jar your sensibilities most offensively. These, of course, are different from the ornate billboards on corners around which prosperity may still be hiding. But, indeed, one never can tell. Nature may be modestly hiding her beauty behind a bock beer sign and, on the other hand, what is hidden may be only a refuse pile.

In either case good wishes go to the Associated Clubs and to all Virginians who seek to preserve the lovely landscape of their State from the abomination which has overtaken, for instance, the boulevard from Washington to Baltimore.

Isolation And Armaments.

It is the wording of the President's message on national defense, rather than the specific emergency expenditures requested, which is startling. The immediate outlays involved represent only small additions to the current military appropriations. But there are several passages in the terse and plain-spoken statement which indicate that the United States is today much closer to world conflicts than the average citizen has yet realized.

Everything in the message, moreover, indicates that the policy of mandatory neutrality and isolation attempted by Congress has been a ghastly failure. Instead of removing the Nation from threats of foreign entanglement it has left a lonely America confronted by a very dangerous combination of potential enemies. "We cannot assume," says Mr. Roosevelt, "that our defense would be limited to one ocean and one coast and that the other ocean and the other coast would with certainty be safe."

To some extent the President may be endeavoring to shake public opinion out of the fool's paradise created by efforts to legislate the country into perpetual peace. The request that Congress should now enact anti-profiteering measures, designed to equalize war burdens, is somewhat ahead of any obvious need. But the false sense of security is so widespread that advice of this character cannot really be called premature. It is one way of awakening Congress to what the Administration's naval and military advisers regard as imperative realities.

Foremost among these is the fact that an isolated America must be prepared against more than a single enemy. If the national policy were to resist aggression by collective action, defense needs would of course be less. But the decision so far has been to regard the spread of the spirit of military conquest as no affair of ours.

Inevitably this attitude involves heavy armament as a defense for the day when successful aggressors, having beaten down preliminary obstacles, may decide to direct their whetted appetites toward the New World. Mr. Roosevelt's message yesterday is the logical sequel to his speech in Chicago on October 5. He warned then that "if those things come to pass in other parts of the world, let no one imagine that America will escape."

Between collective action in behalf of peace and the intensive preparedness forced by the isolationist attitude there is no alternative. When a nation has no disposition to act co-operatively it must build its armaments to the level where it will feel safe if forced to act alone. That, in so many words, is what the President told Congress yesterday.

Thus it is that the militaristic nations have the edge on those which, desiring peace, are yet unable to co-operate to safeguard that condition. A powerful combination of peaceful nations could regard with complete equanimity any threat from an isolated aggressor. But the reverse condition rules today. An isolated peace-loving country sees the rapid development of a co-operating bloc of aggressive states. Under those circumstances what the President calls "adequate defense means" will inevitably become enormous for the United States.

Bogged Down.

The Senate's emphatic refusal to limit debate on the anti-lynching bill should bring the fight for this measure to a speedy close. To continue this futile debate indefinitely would wreck the current session of Congress much as the 1937 session was wrecked by the court bill fight. Neither the Administration nor the Senate leadership can afford to pay such a price for enactment of an unwise bill of doubtful constitutionality.

By foolish filibustering some Southern Senators have undoubtedly jeopardized a good deal of public support in their fight against this bill. The character of the debate has descended to a low level since the lightweights began talking merely to take up time. Tactics of this sort inevitably tend to undermine the strong case previously built up.

On the other hand, the vote on Senator Neely's motion to limit debate reveals a critical weakness on the part of the proponents of the bill. Many Republicans who think it is good politics to support the measure cast their ballots against cloture on general principles. Among the Democrats, a majority voted to let the debate continue. In that decision it is not difficult to find a large measure of disgust over the whole procedure of trying to impose Federal penalties upon States for alleged failure to enforce their own laws.

Of course, a vote on enactment of the anti-lynching bill would produce different results. But if each Senator were to register his private judgment of the measure, uninfluenced by political considerations, it is very likely that the opposition would obtain more than the 51 votes cast against the cloture motion. Lack of political courage will prevent many of these Senators from voting their true convictions if they face a test on the bill itself. Yet they readily took advantage of their chance to knife the measure in the back by voting for continuation of the filibuster.

In these circumstances a move to displace the anti-lynching bill by more important legislation before the Senate should easily prevail. Majority Leader Barkley cannot too quickly press for a solution of the present tangle along this line.

South Still Solid.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I visited my son in Washington a few weeks ago, and I was amazed to find so many people there who have been led to believe that Southern Democrats have turned against President Roosevelt and the New Deal, because of the behavior of a group of so-called "Southern Conservative" Democrats in the Senate and House of Representatives of Congress.

While I am not very familiar with politics in all Southern States, I do know the people of North Carolina, and I am confident that the rank and file of Democrats in this State are now as enthusiastic in their admiration and approval of President Roosevelt and his New Deal as they were in 1932 and 1936. The rank and file of Democrats in North Carolina make up about 99 per cent of the Democratic voters in the State. There are "economic royalists" in the South just as there are in other parts of the country, and, while some of these gentlemen claim to be Democrats, I believe most of them are against the President and the New Deal, just as they are in other parts of the country.

It is an awful pain in the neck to the common people of the Southland to read stories in the metropolitan press about what the "Conservative South" will do about this or about that. The people of the South are just as progressive as the people of any other section of the country. When our Senators and Representatives go contrary to the wishes of a vast majority of Democrats in the Southland, in their opposition to New Deal progressive legislation, we can't help it until we get a chance to vote.

I predict that the people of Washington will see more new faces in the Senate and House from the South after the next election than they have ever seen before. We are just dying for a chance to get at these fellows who rode to office on the great Roosevelt tide of votes, claiming they were squarely behind the President, only to two-time him as soon as he was inaugurated for his second term.

I met a friend from South Carolina the other day and he told me that the rank and file of Democrats of his State could hardly wait until they can get to the polls and show the President and the rest of the country just how they feel about him and the New Deal.

Why some great newspaper doesn't send an unbiased reporter on a tour of the Southern States to get the "low down" on the sentiment of Southern Democrats on the New Deal is more than I can understand. I have written a column and I know columnists. How can a columnist in New York City, Washington or Baltimore know the sentiment of the Southern people? When one of them comes South, he is entertained by the economic royalists and the rich Democrats, who vote the Democratic ticket, while praying the Republicans and the "good old days" will be victorious. He should mingle with the poor working people and the farmers.

China's Trials.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The current struggle on the part of the Chinese people to insure their territorial integrity and save for posterity their democratic ideals is one, the results of which will have a far-reaching effect on republics the world over.

In the past ten years China has made remarkable material strides with the completion of 10,000 miles of railroads and 70,000 miles of improved highways to act as feeders for traffic on railways. In the last ten years China has graduated many millions of students in all grades from kindergartens to colleges and universities. Millions of students graduated in the knowledge that democratic rule, based upon the initiative of the self-reliant individual, is the best form of government on earth.

Is it any wonder that we should show concern over the invasion and destruction brought about by a country nourished on the philosophical reasoning of unscrupulous militarists? Is it any reason that our hearts should go out to a young republic enduring its first trials of learning to rule itself? We well remember a similar nation many years back which had to fight the imperialistic tendencies of foreign nations in order to sustain itself a free-thinking and free-governing people.

The continuance of China as a republic of 400,000,000 people would mean a great deal in this world of constantly vibrating governments, not only to those who still believe in the inherent rights of the individual, but likewise to those who have gone astray and may sometime find their way back.

Pawnshops And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Paeans of praise are due to the many gentlemen actively engaged in efforts to reduce crime in the District by discussions at the Washington Criminal Justice Association's open forums.

Sympathy is extended to Joseph Dayton who, according to Howard F. Wentworth in The Post of January 28, reported to the forum that a typewriter was stolen from his office and later recovered from a pawnshop after he paid a sum to the proprietor. But crime certainly can be suppressed in more becoming style than by throttling already heavily taxed and legally bound pawnshop owners and secondhand dealers.

Mr. Dayton says that Washington's numerous secondhand dealers are contributing to the crime problem. Their activities are not criminal unless they violate the law.

Mr. Dayton would have the dealers report to the police before purchases are made. Under present law, of course, the dealers report their transactions to police within 24 hours.

The problem for the organizations interested in crime suppression is to determine what makes a criminal and then eliminate the cause. Sound methods are cleaning up of the slums—giving kids a chance to get a decent start in life—improving opportunity of earning a living decently.

Eliminating businessmen by taking away their right to conduct legitimate affairs is definitely not the cure! NOT A DEALER.

Religious Liberty In Russia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The hue and cry against communism (I am a single taxer) is just so much dust thrown into the air. That Russia is turning toward the light and the right is evidenced by the recently launched constitution.

Article 13 reads:

For the purpose of securing to the toilers real freedom of conscience, the church is to be separated from the state and the school from the church, and the right of religious and anti-religious propaganda is accorded to every citizen.

Religious liberty and civil freedom go hand-in-hand.

Views On Wages And Prosperity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That President Roosevelt speaks in all sincerity, is not just parroting labor leaders' jargon, is not my place to doubt when he declares wages, in big industry especially, should be maintained uncut despite vastly altered conditions, to keep up demand for goods. But won't this simply result in more skimping and saving whereas if wages "gave" slightly, and more hands were re-employed as a result, more money would be actually put in circulation?

An old buddy of mine is an engineer on a Lake region railway. He drew down fancy wages during the boom; after the depression, despite wage-and-hour cuts, he was still liberally paid. He practically carried several relatives, with less "Seniority," and his father for several years. All these "rails" got back their jobs late in 1936 or early 1937, but joined the "extra board" again with declining traffic and looming of the Roosevelt depression. But the wage boost was the main factor.

My old pal did what he would have derided in his earlier years when that last wage boost went into effect. Thinking that hike premature, ill-advised, and inspired by poor political example, he did some artistic cussing. With his relatives back on his largesse, naturally, he appreciated the extra money; but, being a gink who uses his noodle, he figures that one or more of them would still be on the pay roll except for that ill-timed wage boost.

I give this case for what it is worth and suggest that the Administration put its prestige behind a move to raise wages on the Erie! Thus it could father a principle that would not only plunge the country into a deeper mess but could at the same time evidence its great love for its "friends" by further distributing their unemployment!

E. G. BARR.

Washington, Jan. 27.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As long as the profit system prevails—as long as commodities are produced for the profit of a few at the expense of the many who help produce them—can any sembiance of order or justice be preserved.

Many producers seem to consider only immediate profits, not continuing profits. The latter can come only from a living wage for workers, both in blue jeans and white collars, who provide the big market. Only through steady wages can come steady profits.

In order to make high wages possible, and in order to maintain high wages after they have been established, it takes something more than the talk of philanthropists or industrialist who, for a time and of their own accord, may be willing to pay relatively high wages. It takes an economic power to establish and maintain the high-wage standards. Those employers who might be willing to pay higher wages would soon be confronted with the employers who were not willing and about the only way they could remain in business in a competitive field would be to also reduce wages.

In our day and age the question of high wages as a foundation for prolonged prosperity is no longer confined to the realm of debate. It is a theory which is being put into practice throughout the United States. The results are justifying everything ever claimed for it by its most ardent supporters.

E. D. VERNON.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 26.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Henry George in 1879 showed that the law of wages, of interest and of rent is a natural law. Though our human lawmakers tinker with this natural law, and smart politicians juggle the situation in clever and catch-penny phrases, yet the high and the low, the ignorant and the demagogues, will finally meet the direst punishment.

It is utterly impossible for government to create prosperity by legal statute. There is just one road that is open to us—to free from monopoly the opportunities for work—to open up the channels of trade—to shift the tax burden from labor values on to the land values and public franchises. Jobs should seek men under ideal conditions.

On Our Street.

CITY people are supposed to ignore their neighbors, live close to them for years and never even speak. I am too curious to do that. Perhaps it is because I sprouted in a very small town. While my roots are well established in the city now, I still have the country idea of being neighbors to those close by. If the man next door goes forth with a tape to measure and study his plot I'll go out and water my flowers so as to speak with him.

"Hello," I begin. "What are you up to? Is it to be a new fence or a flower bed?"

If you call over the line to a new resident, why the first thing you know you are swapping iris roots and complaining about the number of dogs on the street. If the neighbor is measuring for a new fence, then it is easy to tell him what kind of fence would enhance the boundary line.

"Oh, can't you just see a white lattice with roses climbing over it . . . and maybe a white picket gate so we can go back and forth?"

Thus I enthuse, only pausing to praise his petunias, and he will not build that ugly wire fence he had contemplated.

On one side of me lives a wholesale chicken dealer. He is never home, too busy chasing loose chickens, perhaps. But his wife loves to scratch in the dirt from morning until night, good weather or bad. I have seen her out in the rain, and I have seen her gardening in a fur coat when the ground was frozen. It is easy to praise her garden, so I do, and when I go away she waters mine.

On the other side of me lives a doctor. The kind of doctor who lives only to cut up people. In his spare moments he likes to cut the grass and shear the hedges, always cutting something. Force of habit, I suppose. One time I saw him digging up large evergreens on a hot day in June.

"Heavens, don't you know you can't fool with nature that way," I protested. "Evergreens should be moved in the fall or early spring, not in this heat."

"What a life your husband must lead, with you to order him around," he evades the issue. "If I water them plenty they'll survive."

"Just like a doctor. I suppose you'd take out my liver even if I had a toothache and it was a hundred in the shade. 'Give her some aspirin and she'll survive,' you'd say to the nurse."

But I have to be a little careful with him, for he holds me up to his wife as a horrible example of what a wife should do.

"Why don't you pull out these weeds, you are home all day," he tells his wife, "like that Mrs. Aldrich, I saw her up at 6 this morning weeding the garden!"

So I have to bake some cookies and take them over to the doctor's wife, and admire the baby, so she won't think me too poisonous.

Across the street is a lawyer with a persuasive voice. His wife is well-manicured. She is also well-cleaned and pressed. Whenever she sees me I am wrinkled and my hands muddy. But I take her a bunch of large Darwin tulips every spring and she forgives my looks.

Next door to the lawyer is an undertaker, a very live one. They have two shiny cars and lots of goings on. There must be money in dead people. I get a chill every time I see their long, black, business-like hearse drive up and park at their front door. Of course, there may not be anything it it, but there has been. If I live here long enough I may get used to the sight of it before my time to ride in it comes.

It parked over there on Christmas eve and I wondered what they were pulling out of it—a Christmas tree, of all things. I wondered if they put picnic lunches in it in summer."

Next door to the undertaker lives a well-known florist. They should be great friends, one gets trade for the other.

I supposed the florist would have a lovely lawn and many flowers in his garden. He doesn't have as many as I do, and, rats, he has just as much witch grass as the rest of us.

Does this collection of neighbors seem odd to anyone else but me, I wonder? I could buy a chicken from the man on my left, eat too much of it and get sick. Then I could call in the lawyer across the street and make a will. The doctor on my right could give me some pills and let me die. Then the undertaker would bury me and the florist would say it with flowers!

Talk about a self-sufficient neighborhood. All we need is a minister.

ELIZABETH ALDRICH.

King On Parking.

The King has made it known as his wish to members of the royal family that they should not ask or seek special traffic privileges except when they are performing official duties.

This includes car parking. In future, royal cars will be parked in the same way as others when visiting places of amusement or friends' homes in congested traffic areas.

One hundred taxi drivers on October 4 drove slowly in a "protest" procession from Leicester Square to Piccadilly Circus. They caused traffic holdups.

They alleged that when the Duchess of Kent dined with friends at the Cafe de Paris, her car was allowed to remain outside—though there is a garage nearby—while taxicabs were moved on.

Lynch History.

CHARLES LYNCH, the Virginia judge and Revolutionary colonel, whose excess of authority in dealing with traitorous Tories gave us the verb "to lynch," is said to have been a descendant of James Lynch Fitz-Stephen, the mayor of Galway, who condemned his own son, Walter, to death for murder, and personally hanged him.

PEGLER.

Thomas Walker Page, in an article on Charles Lynch in the Atlantic Monthly in 1901, wrote: "There is a tradition that somewhere in the misty past one of his forefathers was mayor of a certain Irish city and meted out justice with so stern a hand as to earn the sobriquet 'Hanging Pat.'"

Hardiman's "History of Galway" records the incident but does not mention any relationship between the Irish mayor and the American Judge Lynch, although the father of Judge Lynch did come from Galway. It has been written that the verb "to lynch" descends from the severity of the Galway mayor, but that must be a mistake, for his conduct was in strict accordance with the law. In fact, he performed his duty in defiance of public outcry and at some risk of his own life, for Walter was a popular youth and the situation shocked the people.

* * * *

MOREOVER, there is much data to show that the Virginia Judge Lynch gave rise to the term. He exceeded the law, and the Legislature afterward adopted a resolution condoning his acts, thus admitting that in some circumstances it might be necessary to violate the law in the public interest. The Legislature could not actually legalize illegal acts, but the members expressed a hope that their resolution would be accepted as an offset to any claims against Judge Lynch for damages.

With this prestige, lynching came to be regarded as all right, even though unlawful, and, as Mr. Page wrote, "the custom dies slowly." There were 130 lynchings in 1901, when he wrote his story, but there had been 231 only 9 years before and last year there were only 8.

James Lynch Fitz-Stephen's personal code of justice probably was no more typical of high public officers in his time than of men who might find themselves similarly confronted today.

The mayor was a wealthy merchant trading with Cadiz, and on one voyage he invited the young son of a Spanish merchant named Gomez to visit him in Galway. Young Gomez was about the age of the mayor's son, Walter, and one night Walter thought he noticed something in the glance of his fiancee, Agnes, which indicated that the Spaniard was on the point of blighting his life. There was a lovers' quarrel, and the next night Walter observed the Spaniard leaving the home of his O. A. O. (or one and only), where he had gone to polish up her old man's Spanish—if you believe that. Walter didn't.

So Walter chased him down by the docks, shouting, "He shall die, tiddly-eye-tie!" and soon a shriek was heard in the night and a hat with a white plume went floating in the moonlight on the water.

* * * *

WALTER ran away and hid, but came out next day and ran into a posse led by his own father. The mayor foresaw, as Hardiman's "History" says, that should he shrink from his duty public disgrace awaited him, which is a humorously solemn view by comparison with the official morals of a day when a father's first thought in comparable conditions would be to ignore suspicions of questionable conduct by his son, prevent investigation, change the subject and find a position of public trust for him.

Mayor James Lynch Fitz-Stephen, with an honor that nowadays will appear to have been equally naive and brutal, with his own lips pronounced sentence of death on his boy and sat up with him throughout the night before the execution, in two capacities. He wished to be present as the boy's father and comforter, but he was there as guard, also, to see that he shouldn't escape.

"He remembered," says Hardiman, "that already he had used his authority with rigid severity in the case of another," and he was determined that nobody should accuse him of giving a member of his own family preferred treatment.

The mayor spent the rest of his days in mourning and never showed his face again, but obviously it would be wrong to say that his conduct was the origin of the verb "to lynch." On the contrary, he would have been guilty of lynching only if he had failed to apply to his son the same treatment that he gave to others.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

'What's Wrong With This Picture?'

Installment-plan buying, for 25 years the white-haired boy of the American economic system, is now, temporarily at least, in the doghouse.

* * * *

After having been born, nursed, coddled, milk-fed and given the run of the works for a quarter of a century, old Col. Time Payment finds himself in official disfavor.

* * * *

In fact, recent Washington utterances indicate he is almost on the Potomac as a public enemy, an unethical Bourbon and a foe of the more abundant life, despite all those washing machines, vacuum cleaners, radios and automobiles.

* * * *

For a generation the American people have been trained to load up with the nice things of life on the so-much-down-and-so-much-a-week plan. All anybody needed to get anything from an oil furnace to an imperial sedan was a reasonable deposit and an honest face.

* * * *

It got so they'd even waive the honest face.

* * * *

A man on a part-time job at the glue works got home at night to find that his wife had bought a baby grand piano, a couple of beach wagons, a fresh set of the Harvard Classics, a motor tractor and a de luxe radio cabinet.

* * * *

When the startled husband exclaimed, "Why the tractor, Bess? We ain't got no farm!" she replied, "I know it, but the man said he would get us one on the time plan next week."

* * * *

Not a word against buying a limousine on a bicycle income was ever said officially. The folks were sold on the idea that it was okay to be in a deep hole as long as the hole had all the modern luxuries and necessities.

* * * *

In fact, they could always trade it in for a new hole and get a good allowance.

* * * *

And now Mr. Roosevelt gives the chill to the idea, insisting that it is overdone and demanding that the manufacturers make it a little harder for the people to get what they can't afford.

* * * *

Well, wait until the Little Woman hears that the Democrats have decided to solve the present national problems by making it harder for her to get that ice box, television set, Nifty Eight Sedan and bird's-eye maple dining-room suite!

Pies to the Potomac.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life is but an empty dream
And the virtues of time payments
Aren't always what they seem!

Jazz orchestras are now being allowed to give concerts in Carnegie Hall, and would you suggest changing the name to "Corny-gie?"

Down in Miami the other day thieves dug up and stole a quarter of a mile of water mains. Up in New York State robbers recently invaded a cemetery and stole a couple of cannon and a bronze statue. Now we know what is meant by "heavy industries."

Richberg Plan

Ex-NRA Chief's Three-Point Proposal For Joining Business And Government Follows 1922 Sketch Of Herbert Hoover.

By Herbert M. Bratter.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

AS A RESULT OF statements by the President and several of his vigorous spokesmen, "monopoly" has become the word of the month. Mr. Roosevelt has indicated that he plans shortly to send to Congress a message embodying his thoughts on trade practices and related matters. In view of the business recession, his recommendations will have the country's close attention.

The President is said to favor the so-called Richberg plan as a way of clarifying the business atmosphere. That plan, publicly summarized by the former NRA chief in New York on January 26, centers on the designation of an administrative body within the Government specifically empowered to pass upon the prima facie legality of proposed co-operative activities of businessmen; e. g., trade association activities, trade practice agreements, etc. The plan calls for less automatic government regulation of business and more self-regulation of business with Government aid.

It is interesting to note that the novel part of this plan is identical with one proposed by Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover in 1922. Since the suggestion seems eminently a good one, it is to be hoped that businessmen on the one hand will not reject it because of its New Deal indorsement, and that the New Deal on the other hand will not dislike it for the Hoover strain in its ancestry.

Liberalized Anti-Trust Law View Urged By Hoover

In 1922 Secretary Hoover, after reviewing the country's experience under the several anti-trust acts, pointed out that many co-operative efforts which would be in the interests of public welfare were stifled out of fear or shackled by uncertainty. Suggesting only "a narrow field of liberalization of the law," Mr. Hoover proposed that—> cooperative organization generally, as distinguished from capital consolidations, should be permitted to file with some appropriate governmental agency the plan of their operations, the functions they proposed to carry on, and the objectives they proposed to reach; that upon approval such of those functions as did not apparently contravene public interest might be proceeded with; that upon complaint, however, either of individuals or the law officers of the Government that these functions had reacted against public interest, then after a public hearing before some suitable tribunal the right to continue those particular functions should, if the complaints are justified, be suspended.

> . . . Such a measure as that suggested above would serve actually to protect small business and thus to maintain competition . . . It appears to me that the time has come when we should take cognizance of these necessities if we are to have a progressive economic system.

What Mr. Richberg now proposes is what Mr. Hoover proposed. The plan therefore may be described as the Hoover-Richberg plan.

Mr. Richberg comes to the "inevitable conclusions" that Government should encourage and help private business, and that business should accept public responsibilities. "When businessmen and groups seek to co-operate, presumably for their common benefit and in the public interest, they should expect and welcome the scrutiny of representatives of the public." There should be such public supervision "that the public may be assured that public interests are being safeguarded and that public benefits will be produced." Legislation assuring closer relations between business and the Federal Government Mr. Richberg sees as both a need and, he hopes, a prospect.

Uncertainty Seen At Seat Of Businessmen's Discomfort

IF THE COMPLAINTS of businessmen these past several years are to be summarized in one word, that word is "uncertainty." Businessmen must feel like men building houses in a region where intermittent earthquakes have latterly made their appearance. The shocks may be severe or they may be mild. But the house builders don't know what to expect next, and are too scared to continue building. Business has long had a general distrust of President Roosevelt, and the feeling has been reciprocated. As a result, all suffer.

Mr. Richberg is intimately acquainted with the views of the President and of business men. He has sympathy with both viewpoints. He is sincerely desirous of bringing both sides closer together. To remove some of the grounds for economic uncertainty Mr. Richberg suggests three things:

1. Clarification of the antitrust laws so that monopolies and unfair practices will be more clearly defined, both in the interest of enforcement and to protect honest efforts to comply with the law.
2. Establishment of the administrative agency mentioned above (probably within the Commerce Department).
3. Despite existence of the new agency approving co-operative agreements, assurance of freedom of private parties or the Government to seek relief through civil suit against any alleged illegal combination. The administrative approval he suggests should only protect again criminal prosecutions and civil liability of unknown dimensions for actions of undetermined illegality.

As one who played a leading part in NRA, Mr. Richberg is certainly aware of the major defects of that experiment. The Government advanced too rapidly along too broad a front. In a field which had developed abuses and defects, the Government suddenly attempted to introduce reforms and regulations which, under the circumstances, in many instances only tended to foster monopoly.

Richberg Said Reconciled To More Cautious Experiment.

OF THE ADVANTAGES of proceeding more cautiously, and on a narrower front, Mr. Richberg is now fully aware. Instead of introducing and seeking to enforce codes for the toothbrush and picnic-fork industries, logic and experience dictate that attention be centered on the big industries. Instead of having college boys and inexperienced if enthusiastic scions of government bureaucracy dictate to business on the basis of mimeographed orders from the fourth floor, Mr. Richberg sees the advantage of an unhurried, intimate meeting of minds between the top men of business and the top men of government.

This meeting of minds, incidentally, apparently is not proposed to be confined to the co-operation of trade associations or other business groups with the administrative agency constituting Mr. Richberg's second point. It will, it is hoped, be supplemented by Mr. Roosevelt's suggested unofficial council of 25 representing not only business, but also labor, agriculture, transportation, credit and other elements in our economic life.

If such a body will make for better mutual understanding between the President and the elements mentioned, much will have been done to clear away the hesitancy which hampers business today.

The American people need not look for a revised NRA. It is to be expected that the President will not now urge any large-scale emergency set up such as that. He will more probably lay down suggestions for long-range and permanent application, with the recommendation for careful examination and consideration, which his proposals are sure to receive in any case. It will be surprising if Mr. Richberg's three points are not a basic part of Mr. Roosevelt's message.

Basic Dilemma

By Barnet Nover.

Van Zeeland Makes His Report.

A LITTLE LESS than ten months ago, Paul Van Zeeland, then premier of Belgium, was entrusted with an ambitious mission by the governments of Great Britain and France. Technically speaking, he was asked to conduct "an inquiry into the possibility of obtaining a general reduction of quotas and of other obstacles to international trade." But the larger purpose of his mission was to pave the way for an economic rapprochement between the Fascist powers, on the one hand, and the great democracies on the other and in so doing, ease the present dangerous tensions in the world.

Certainly in the Europe and world of today political factors cannot be divorced from economic considerations and vice versa. Neither can be treated in a vacuum. But that very circumstance made Mr. Van Zeeland's task an almost insuperable one.

* * * *

HIS REPORT bears this out. It is limited to a discussion of the factors standing in the way of economic recovery, to such matters as tariffs, quotas, exchange restrictions, efforts in the direction of national self-containment, the freezing up of the international capital market, etc., and to ways and means these obstacles to international trade can be removed. But at every point in his enlightened discussion political ghosts arise to make a mockery of the Belgian statesman's hesitant optimism.

That is why his inquiry is likely, for the time being, to prove so completely futile. To undertake it at all he had to convince himself that the Fascist powers no less than the democratic are interested in the same thing, namely, "the improvement of the standard of life of the masses, the increase of the well-being of the population." And having convinced himself of this it became possible for him to argue, as so many before him had done, of the wisdom of lowering excessively high trade barriers, abolishing quotas, exchange restrictions and other impediments to a freer flow of trade across international frontiers.

* * * *

THEORETICALLY the statesmen of every nation, including those now pursuing precisely the opposite course to that which Van Zeeland so earnestly recommends, are quite willing to agree with him about the advantages to be derived from fewer barriers and freer trade. They have often done so and they did so again when the Belgian statesman queried them on the subject. As he points out:

> As regards the principle of collaboration in order to reduce the obstacles to international economic relations, not a single discordant voice was heard.

Yet he doletully adds:

> But if this first reception was thus far encouraging the positive reactions, which I was able to record, were less so.

And the reasons for that are all too clear. Such a regime of international collaboration for economic appeasement which Mr. Van Zeeland advocates is possible only in a world at peace and by nations which regard the continuance of peace as wholly desirable. But the world of today is a world in which peace has either disappeared altogether, as in the Far East and Spain, or rests on very fragile foundations. Moreover, three of the seven great powers regard war not only as a valuable instrument of policy but also as a good in itself.

* * * *

IT IS THIS state of mind rather than economic pressure which is primarily responsible for German and Italian efforts to achieve autarchy at whatever cost to the well-being of the population. Cannon instead of butter! That is the slogan.

In view of this attitude it is pollyannish to say the least for Great Britain and France to cling to the belief that through the exercise of right reason they can persuade Hitler and Mussolini to a program of peace through economic appeasement.

For the fact is plain that while the governments at Berlin and Rome would like nothing better than to reap the benefits of freer world trade they are not yet prepared to pay the price for such advantages. That is, they are not prepared to give hard and fast commitments that they will not break the peace. By the same token they are not in the least prepared to scrap their excessive rearmament programs which would inevitably have to follow the conclusion of a general economic pact.

The time may come when because of internal tensions both Mussolini and Hitler will have to put the brake on their present economic policies. There is a limit beyond which even the most powerful dictator cannot reduce the standard of living of the masses of the people without courting disaster to himself and his regime. But whether that limit has now been reached either in Germany or Italy is very much open to question.

* * * *

IN OTHER WORDS Great Britain and France when they sent Van Zeeland on his mission were acting on the entirely false assumption that it was economic pressure within Germany and Italy which is wholly responsible for the present extreme efforts made in both nations to achieve self-containment.

Economic pressure unquestionably played a part. But the principal reason behind the attempt to become self-contained is not economic but political—the desire to be so fully prepared for war that when war comes outside economic pressure, as in the form of sanctions, will not bring about a collapse of the military machine which they look to to achieve certain objectives. Since they are not prepared to abandon the war weapon as a means of achieving their objectives, they are not prepared to abandon autarchy and all that goes with it.

Thus the political cleavage between the democratic powers and the Fascist nations is widened by an economic cleavage as well. And the more the democratic nations seek to break down the barriers obstructing trade, and succeed in doing so—at least among themselves and those prepared to join them in this great endeavor—the greater the gap separating them from the totalitarian bloc.

This fact is recognized in London and Paris and Brussels and Washington. That is why, last April, the British and French governments began once more to pursue the will-o'-the-wisp of international economic co-operation that disregarded ideological differences between states.

They are only too eager to live on terms of amity with all states, whether democratic, Fascist or Communist. Their philosophy is one of amity. But that philosophy, unfortunately, is not the philosophy of nations. Which is why Mr. Van Zeeland's mission was doomed before it began and why his well-reasoned report is but another voice crying in a wilderness.

Younger Women

By
Eudora Ramsay Richardson.

The Listlessness Of Old Men.

WOMEN not only look younger than men of their age but are younger by all the tests that mean anything. Lloyd Jones' investigations showed the specific gravity of blood higher in old women than in old men—which means, of course, that old women are "younger" than old men.

The life expectancy of women past middle age is longer than that of men. So the insurance companies are not guilty of a discrimination when they charge women more for annuities than they charge men.

* * * *

SINCE an active mind keeps the body young, it is fair to conclude that this physical superiority of women often has a mental basis. More women than men are voracious readers and listen to addresses on subjects that are stimulatingly controversial. If you doubt the truth of that statement, stand for half a day near the dispensing desk at any public library, count the borrowers and take a look at the sort of books women are taking home. Then go to the open forums that your city provides for the inquiring among its citizens and note how many more women than men are in the audience.

Tom McCarthy

Mine Workers' Convention.

LAUGHTER lashed out like a whip, within a moment of the announcement of death.

It wasn't that they felt less bad about the dead. They simply didn't have room for hypocrisy. And when something funny happened . . . they laughed.

McCARTHY.

In other conventions the laughter might have been squeezed back into the throats. But at the United Mine Workers of America convention yesterday, at the Rialto Theater, they laughed when they found cause. And anyway death was no novelty to them. It was something which happened all the time.

Laughter on the other hand seemed a more foreign visitor to their faces. They sat around in flannel shirts and shiny blue suits, and they listened without grinning to the unending routine announcements. And they walked out into the lobby to stretch their legs and look at the signs around the circular anteroom.

But, even in the lobby, their faces didn't relax much as they gathered by twos and threes, or stood alone, to down a bottle of Coca-Cola. They were supposed to be workingmen, and they looked the part. If the lines in their faces were any indication, life didn't look like particularly funny business to them.

And that, possibly, was why they laughed when they had the chance . . . 2,000 of them . . . within seconds of an announcement of death.

* * * *

A SLEEK official of the U. M. W., with a well-pressed suit and a banker's voice, had been reading announcements. He had been calling out the names of various delegates who were wanted on the phone. He had listed over the cases which would be heard before the committee, in the matter of contested elections of delegates to the convention.

All the time, John L. Lewis moved ponderously up and down the platform, already crowded with officers, a dead cigar draped from the corner of his mouth and sternly anchored between his teeth. In the auditorium, the delegates shifted uneasily in their well-worn suits and, dragging deeply on old pipes and thick cigars, added to the blue haze of the auditorium.

The man with the banker's voice went on reading over the announcements, and then he came to one which he delivered with a touch of something like respectful restraint.

The miners heard that one of their number had been called home and that his son was dead.

* * * *

THE FACES in the auditorium didn't change. There were no hypocritical pursings of the lips and no tender undertones of sympathy. They merely sat there rubbing pick-roughened fingers up and down unfamiliar creases in their trouser legs. But before there was time for another announcement, something happened to the microphone.

Possibly it was merely a bit of static electricity or, maybe, one of the miners had inadvertently brought his palms together to applaud, as a misplaced gesture of sympathy toward an announcement of death. Whatever caused it, there was a loud pop from the public address system and it was funny. It was a funny noise . . . so the miners roared.

Tanned and wrinkled necks bent backward and calloused hands slapped on thighs. More polite but less realistic gatherings might have been horrified. But the laughter sustained itself and the meeting proceeded without further comment.

At the close of the day's session, Mr. John L. Lewis applied a match to his habitually dead cigar, exhaled a cloud of smoke and accepted a move for adjournment. Then, slowly and with none of the usual schoolboy enthusiasm of the ordinary recessing convention, the delegates filed out, quietly elbowing each other up the aisles, without apologies.

And a few of the delegates crowded up to the platform to meet Mr. Lewis. He stood there, right hand extended, left hand clasping his cigar, greeting the delegates.

And, when they filed by, there was none of the subservient gesturing which you expect to find lavished on the leader of a powerful organization. They walked up straightly, held back till the first man was through talking, held out their hands and said simple things like, "I'm Red Martin from Coal Creek, Colo.," or "I'm Jake Thompson from Clover Splint, Local No. ——"

When the crowd had thinned out a little, and the United Mine Workers Band was swinging into its last march, I asked Mr. Lewis what he thought about when he looked out over the smoke-hazed auditorium these days. And, since it was the first time I had met him, I was surprised to find that he is not as tall as his pictures indicate; that his eyebrows are red.

He told me what he thought about . . . or, at least, he told me that he was telling me what he thought about . . . and his left hand clenched his dead cigar and moved forward in straight-arm jabs toward the emptying auditorium. He was only talking to me; but he spoke and gestured as if he were addressing an audience.

"I see something elemental out there," he said. And as he said it, his heavy voice was tense. And it brought back the image of the 2,000 stern, unsmiling miners.

"I look out there, and see men that have fought black in the mines," he said. "I see men that have known what a mine flood can be. And I know that behind each of them stands 100 to 500 men. The same kind of men!

"I know them to be elemental. I call them straight-thinkers. And I know that when this convention is over they will go back to their jobs. I know they will go back to jobs that claim nearly 2,000 lives every year. I know they will go back to jobs where for every man killed their are 100 injured.

"I see something that has made the United Mine Workers the strongest labor organization in the world!"

His heavy jaw seemed to crush the words out in bits, his left hand descended toward the speaker's table. Clenched on the cigar, it rested there.

"I see something elemental," he said. And I had the picture of that auditorium full of unsmiling mine workers suddenly rocked into unashamed laughter, split seconds after an announcement of death.

President's Defense Message

The text of President Roosevelt's defense message to Congress follows:

The Congress knows that for many years this Government has sought in many capitals with the leaders of many governments to find a way to limit and reduce armaments and to establish at least the probability of world peace.

The Congress is aware, also, that while these efforts, supported by the hopes of the American people, continue and will continue, they have nevertheless failed up to the present time.

We, as a peaceful nation, cannot and will not abandon active search for an agreement among the nations to limit armaments and end aggression. But it is clear that until such agreement is reached—and I have not given up hope of it—we are compelled to think of our own national safety.

It is with the deepest regret that I report to you that armaments increase today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. It is an ominous fact that at least one-fourth of the world's population is involved in spite of the fact that most people in most countries, including those where conflict rages, wish to live in peace. Armies are fighting in the Far East and in Europe; thousands of civilians are being driven from their homes and bombed from the air. Tension throughout the world is high.

As Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States it is my constitutional duty to report to the Congress that our national defense is, in the light of the increasing armaments of other nations, inadequate for purposes of national security and requires increase for that reason.

In spite of the well-known fact that the American standard of living makes our ships, our guns and our planes cost more for construction than in any other nation and that the maintenance of them and of our Army and Navy personnel is more expensive than in any other nation, it is also true that the proportion of the cost of our military and naval forces to the total income of our citizens or to the total cost of our government is far lower than in the case of any other great nation.

Specifically and solely because of the piling up of additional land and sea armaments in other countries, in such manner as to involve a threat to world peace and security, I make the following recommendations to the Congress:

(1) That there be authorized for the Army of the United States additions to anti-aircraft material in the sum of $8,800,000 and that of this sum $6,800,000 be appropriated for the fiscal year 1939.

(2) That there be authorized and appropriated for the better establishment of an enlisted reserve for the Army the sum of $450,000.

(3) That there be authorized the expenditure of $8,080,000 for the manufacture of guns, dies and other aids to manufacture of Army materiel, the sum of $5,000,000 thereof to be expended during the fiscal year 1939.

$2,000,000 for Ammunition.

(4) That the sum of $2,000,000 be authorized and appropriated toward the making up of deficiencies in ammunition for the Army.

(5) That the existing authorized building program for increases and replacements in the Navy be increased by 20 per cent.

(6) That the Congress authorize and appropriate for the laying down of two additional battleships and two additional cruisers during the calendar year 1938. This will call for the expenditure of a very small amount of Government funds during the fiscal year 1939.

(7) That the Congress authorize and appropriate a sum not to exceed $15,000,000 for the construction of a number of new types of small vessels, such construction to be regarded as experimental in the light of new developments among navies; and to include the preparation of plans for other types of ships in the event that it may be necessary to construct such ships in the future.

I believe also that the time has come for the Congress to enact legislation aimed at the prevention of profiteering in time of war and the equalization of the burdens of possible war. Such legislation has been subject for many years of full study to this and previous Congresses.

Protection for All Shores.

It is necessary for all of us to realize that the unfortunate world conditions of today have resulted too often in the discarding of those principles and treaties which underline international law and order; and in the entrance of many new factors into the entire conduct of war.

Adequate defense means that for the protection not only of our coasts but also of our communities far removed from the coast, we must keep any potential enemy many hundred miles away from our continental limits.

We cannot assume that our defense would be limited to one ocean and one coast and that the other ocean and the other coast would with certainty be safe. We cannot be certain that the connecting link—the Panama Canal—would be safe. Adequate defense affects therefore the simultaneous defense of every part of the United States of America.

It is our clear duty to further every effort toward peace but at the same time to protect the Nation. That is the purpose of these recommendations. Such protection is and will be based not on aggression but on defense.

National U. Gets Leslie Garnett as New Chancellor

Former U. S. Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday was named Chancelor of National University, succeeding Judge Charles S. Hatfield, of the U. S. Court of Customs Appeals, who resigned last fall.

Garnett resigned as District Attorney January 1, after serving almost five years. Judge Hatfield became chancellor of the university in 1931. Since his resignation, Dean Charles Pergler, of the Law School, has been acting in his stead.

National University was founded 69 years ago, with President Grant as its first chancellor. Succeeding him as chancellors were Presidents Hayes, Garfield, Arthur and Cleveland.

The institution has an enrollment of more than 1,000, and all the students are working their way toward degrees. Average age of the students in the Law School is over 30 years.

Roosevelt Gives Backing to Crop Insurance Plan

Beginning Made on 'Ever-Normal' Program After White House Talk.

By the Associated Press.

A beginning on a broad system of Government insurance of crops will be made under the "ever normal granary" program, legislators said yesterday.

They reported a proposal to start all-risk insurance for wheat next season had received President Roosevelt's approval at a White House conference attended by Representative Jones (Democrat), Texas, and Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho.

Pope and Jones are members of the joint Congressional committee which has nearly completed the job of drafting a single new farm program on the basis of separate granary bills passed by the House and Senate.

At the White House conference, the President was informed wheat insurance could be financed with funds remaining from 1937 farm benefit payments.

Senator Pope, sponsor of the insurance plan drafted by the Agriculture Department, estimated administrative costs could be limited to about $6,000,000 the first year, and that a reserve of about $20,000,000 would be needed to meet possible losses from drought, flood, frosts, insect pests or other natural hazards.

Directed by Edward Buzzell. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Several sure-fire angles have been rolled into one to lend speed and variety to "Paradise for Three." There are the winter sport and hotel life backgrounds, the millionaire masquerading as a poor man, the Cinderella boy who attracts a rich girl and, for originality, a neat flick at the prize contest racket. It all adds up to smooth and rather fast entertainment.

Essentially the show is a triumph for Frank Morgan, Robert Young and that trio of topping character people, Herman Bing, Edna May Oliver and Reginald Owen. This is utterly appropriate, since a nutty show calls for plenty of high-class nutsie-wutsies

Robert Young plays a young man who can win prize contests standing on his head, but cannot land a regular job. He pays his rent with washing machines and suchlike odds and ends won in contests. But what is his delight when he wins a free trip to a resort hotel by writing a slogan. Here he meets millionaire Frank Morgan, who has won a similar prize under a nom de plume; also siren Mary Astor, who is on the lookout for a rich man; also the financier's daughter, Florence Rice, who has followed poppa. There are double romances, one financial ending in a breach of promise suit; one purely romantic and ending with a tinkle of wedding bells. There is skiing with Edna May Oliver doing a header into a snowdrift, ladies get into the wrong hotel rooms and the millionaire has to wash dishes to pay his dinner check.

"Horsing Around."

Generally, "Paradise for Three" may be rated as just good-natured "horsing around" raised to a fairly high plane by a gifted cast. It has a skating scene, surprisingly lovely, and easily one of the prettiest bits of photography you'll see in anyone's picture.

Robert Young and Frank Morgan, one as a debonair youth and the other as a debonair old codger, play perfectly in parts exactly cut to fit them. Beautiful Mary Astor hasn't a chance to be muchbutbeautiful and moderately seductive as a Continental gold digger, while Florence Rice is a fresh and acceptable ingenue.

Our old pal, Herman Bing, fairly glitters as a minor hotel worker with a genius for poking his nose into other folks' business. Reginald Owen clicks in his usual way, figuring as a valet with an inflated ego. Henry Hull, a really great stage actor, appears to advantage in a small part.

Washington has contributed the smartest newsreel performers of the year. We refer to those two passengers who flew around for hours in that plane that couldn't get down. The fellas are humorous, easy and face the camera with gayety. But facing a camera probably didn't mean a thing to them after facing that trick night flight.

A smart short shows all kinds of freak animals ranging from a one-horned bull, a sort of modern unicorn, to a baby giant panda and circus elephants doing a little winter plowing in Florida.

Stage Bill Clicks.

Sid Gary's gorgeous barytone is heard to advantage in "Rollin' Home," his pet song, "Ol' Man River" and the lovely "Rosalie." Mr. Gary is one of those radio performers who doesn't need to learn stage technique. If he just sings, that's enough to please any audience.

"Shadow" Stuart and M. C. Martin perform hilariously and, incidentally, have a new way of referring to the orchestra which they call "Phil Lampkin and his lampshades." This reminds that Mr. Lampkin and his lampshades present a very pretty Victor Herbert overture with fine vocalistics, also that Phil has a new black and white baton that looks like fireworks when he goes into action.

The two Richards and Adrienne contribute attractive adagio and the two dozen Chester Hale Girls are quite a revelation in precision dancing. George Prentice does a Punch and Judy show in the classical manner.

Palace

"Mannequin" is Joan Crawford plus one of the Katherine Brush's fairy tales, with gowns by Adrian and a few deft touches by Director Frank Borzage. It is a Cinderellaish bit of tinsel, having to do with Joan's hatred of the dingy life circumstance forces her to lead; how she struggles to escape an environment which seemed to her destiny; how she thinks she loves one man and finds she loves another.

Ah, tis wonderful! The poor gal suffers and suffers, and arches her beautiful brows and hops in and outa fine garments and has poor Spencer Tracy getting yet another furrow in his brow because he almost thinks she will stay with her husband just because she figures she loves the dope. Said husband is a handsome young tough whose real name is Alan Curtis. If he can control that Cagney-ish grimace of the kisser, he might do right well for himself.

Some press agent said Crawford said this story parallels her own rise in the world, which may give ideas to young factory-girls, such as she portrays with such pathos, before she begins to acquire gowns by Adrian and diamonds by Tiffany.

Notable are some of the scenes in Joan's tenement home, which are lightly passed over, which is sad. The parents and Clifford, the young brother, are fine types and have at least one good scene.

Fritz Lang would have handled Tracy's striking barge-workers differently. But this is Borzage's picture, with plenty of lovely Crawford close-ups and occasional good dialogue and the happy ending which she handles so well.

It is the best vehicle which Crawford has had for too long, even with all its faults. It will not disappoint her fans.

Arthur Murray demonstrates the Shag in a short, and there is a lame little subject titled tentatively "What do you think?" and we thought it was impossible and the newsreel also, which was replete with a wife and her 17 children and all. Ho hum. S. S.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'True Confession' and Fine Stage Show Compile a Frivolous Bill at the Earle

John Barrymore Registers Great Comic Portrayal; Irene Beasley Hits.

"TRUE CONFESSION." Paramount picturization of a play by Louis Verneuil and Georges Berr, adapted to the screen by Claude Binyon, costarring Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray and John Barrymore, with Una Merkel, Porter Hall, Edgar Kennedy, Lynne Overman, Fritz Feld, Richard Carle, John T. Murray, Tommy Dugan, Garry Owen, Toby Wing and Hattie McDaniel. Directed by Wesley Ruggles. Previewed Wednesday, January 26. At the Earle Theater.

Continuing the cycle of screen farces that lean to the "goofy" side, this subject combines with an imposing roster of stellar names a novel and extremely amusing basic idea.

BELL.

It sets in juxtaposition a frittery—if there is such a word—young woman with a penchant for writing imaginative fiction and her serious and wholly ethical young lawyer-husband. There seems to be no time in her life when Helen Bartlett can do with the truth. Similarly, there is no time in Kenneth Bartlett's life when he can condone anything but a strict adherence to fact.

Upon this premise has been founded one of the most ridiculous "mystery murder" trials that ever has found its way before the cameras. Mrs. Bartlett, to help out the family exchequer, accepts a secretarial position with an "old friend of the family." It is to pay her $50 for three hours of daily labor in a five-day week. It turned out to be as spurious as it sounds and Helen fled the place, leaving her hat, jacket, gloves and purse. When she returned to retrieve them, Otto Kraylor was dead on the floor of his elaborate "office," with two bullets through his head. Mrs. Bartlett was promptly accused by an especially dumb plain clothes man of having been the perpetrator of the homicidal deed. Her husband will not listen to the truth and defends what he concieves to be the actual facts in the case—murder in justifiable self-defense.

Nonsensical But Nice.

From that point on, the piece goes completely and hilariously berserk. There is not an ounce of sense in it, but there is a terrific amount of insane entertainment. Kenneth wins his case, wins also a reputation as a great criminal lawyer and the chatterbox wife sells her life story for a fabulous sum.

In the meantime, a pseudo-philosophical "criminologist" attempts to turn the whole dizzy thing to his own account. He had a very elegant idea, but unfortunately it blew up in his face. There were also a few ideas that Daisy McClure had that blew up in her face also.

The entire fabric of the play is pure shoddy, save for that sound basic idea that counterpoints sharply contrasted characters with a subtle skill that is seldom encountered in either the living or the celluloid theater. A lunatic overtone of unconscionable farce always is ballasted by the realization that there are people like that in the world and that the thing sometime, somewhere, actually might happen.

"True Confession" is beautifully played by a cast of admirable selection. Carole Lombard, as the scatter-brained young wife, adds appreciably to her stature as an actress with a fine sense of comedy. Her trick of rolling her tongue in her cheek is a sure barometer of her impending indulgence in a merry succession of falsehoods and provides one of the obvious keys to the comedy's developments. Fred MacMurray, as the barrister-spouse does handsomely by a part that could easily be ruined by taking it less seriously than he does in every important movement of the plot. But the acting honors unequivocally go to John Barrymore, in the role of Charley Jasper, the bibbling bar-fly, who sees fortune within his grasp and then sees it fade into nonexistence when his own colossal hoax is deflated. Mr. Barrymore's part is far from the most important in the play, but it stamps him as the true artist—the truest in the cast.

Valuable supporting roles are played in their usual fine fettle by Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy, Porter Hall, Richard Carle and Lynne Overman. Mr. Kennedy is the dim-witted cop, Mr. Carle a delightfully balmy judge and Mr. Hall a prosecuting attorney the like of whom you never have seen—which is just as well, if you ever have to go to court.

Another Swift Revue.

The second of Harry Anger's stage revues, "The Sidewalks of New York" is in harmony with the genial quality of the screen bill. He employs the conspicuously competent services of Irene Beasley, songstress; the 12 Aristocrats, a mixed double sextet of dancers; Fenwick and Cook, two male acrobats and gymnasts of the first rank; Carl Freed and his harmonica ensemble and Harris and Shore, among the best of the eccentric dancers, to form a closely-knit and fast-moving revue, with the orchestra on stage as musical background.

Miss Beasley, Mr. Freed and his mouth organs, Harris and Shore and the others always are hits in Washington and yesterday afternoon was no exception. Harris and Shore, by the way, after a deal of clowning around in most delectable fashion, in their last number, "Stomping at the Ritz," reveal just what graceful artists they really are.

The principal screen auxiliary of the Earle's new bill is the short-reel skiing subject to which reference already has been made on this page. It is a gem in its field.

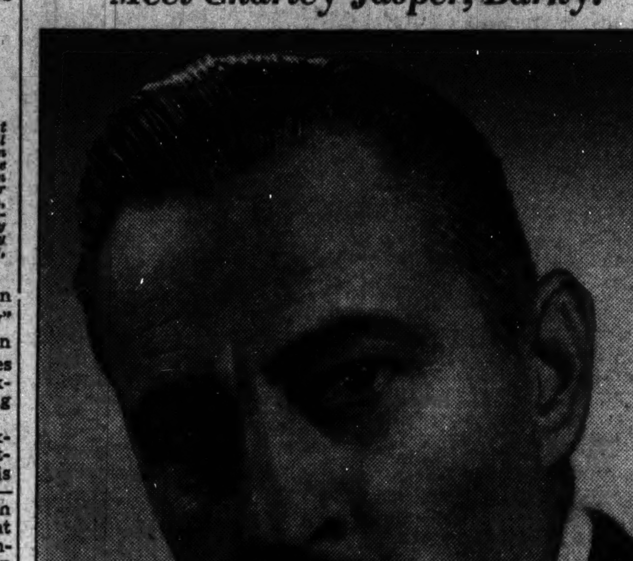

The Paramount News and customary house features further augment a feature that would be excellent screen fare without John Barrymore, but is nudged up into the upper brackets with him in it.

You'll find another column by Nelson Bell in The Sunday Post.

In Whiskers.

For the first time in his motion picture career Gary Cooper wears a mustache in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Despite the title of the picture, however, the lank actor does not wear a beard.

Meet Charley Jasper, Barfly!

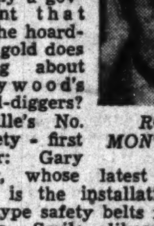

JOHN BARRYMORE,

who reverts to the methods of his early days as one of the living theater's foremost comedians in one of the three stellar roles in "True Confession," being presented this week as chief screen feature of the bill at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray complete the triumvirate of stars in this lunatic but laughable picture.

In Hollywood — With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 28.—Idol Chatter: Rosalind Russell, unlike most stars, not only talks about "good books" but actually reads 'em. Robert Montgomery always reminds me of the boy the graduating class voted "most likely to succeed." Wonder why a government that bans the hoarding of gold does nothing about Hollywood's gold-diggers? Filmville's No. 1 safety-first booster: Gary Cooper, whose latest stroke of genius is the installation of airplane-type safety belts in his automobiles. Smile alikes: Olivia de Haviland and Olympe Bradna.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY.

Maybe I am being unkind, but the name of Paramount's new actor, Archie Twitchell, always gives me a chuckle.. Set workers all tell me that Ginger Rogers is the most even-tempered star in pictures . . . red hair nothwithstanding. Frank McHugh's one regret is that he could not be a lawyer. Among other things that amaze me is the discovery that Joe E. Brown is really sensitive about the size of that oral cavern.

* * * *

Hollywood's newest yachting enthusiast: George Sanders and he is going the rest one better by building his own. Never think of Carole Lombard as a temperamental lady, but she does refuse to go before a movie camera unless her favorite cinematographer, Teddy Tetzlaff, is behind it. Hollywood similies: as unwelcome as a star's first wrinkle. Sonja Henie is the most heavily insured screen star—her policies total nearly $3,000,000. And Basil Rathbone, by the way, started his adult career as an insurance salesman.

In spite of the fact that he is not an actor, Howard Hughes is one of Hollywood's most colorful characters. So many times a millionaire that he could afford to play ducks and drakes with sums that would appall the average "rich man," he toyed with the production of screen colossals until he tired of the pastime. Now he is lavishing his money on aviation. I remember one incident during the filming of "Hell's Angels." Discovering that the studio had overcharged him $3.63 for projection room rental, he flew into tempest of rage. An hour later he decided to buy ice cream for the production crew and cast. The production manager protested that his "ice cream social" would cause a delay costing hundreds of dollars. Hughes listened placidly and then suddenly flamed, "Who the hell is paying for this picture?" They had the ice cream social.

Played golf today with Milton Berle and Jack Oakie. Jack shoots a pretty fair game; Milton just shoots—and his erratic slices and hooks have always been the subject of Oakie's most scathing wit. Today, Berle, who announced that he had not played for nearly two months, was in worse form than usual—on the first few holes—and Oakie's insults reached a new high. On the sixth tee Berle proposed a bet and chided Jack into giving him plenty of strokes. And from there on I witnessed the humiliation of Mr. Oakie. Milton's shots improved miraculously.. He won hole after hole while Jack moaned. And I am afraid the Oakie moans will be still more dismal when he learns that Milton Berle has been taking secret lessons every day for weeks, his revenge for months of insult.

And here's one for Ripley—Marcia Ralston (Mrs. Phil Harris) was born in Australia and spent her girlhood there. A few days ago she began work in her first important screen role and it happened that her first scenes were filmed "on location" in the Seelig Zoo. The director, noting that she seemed excited, took time out to reassure her, believing, of course, that she was suffering from camera fright. The laugh was on him. Marcia Ralston, the Australian girl, was excited because of an animal in a nearby cage. It was the first live kangaroo she had ever seen!

Metropolitan

Painting a wide and colorful canvas of the conquest of the continent by transportation and communication, "Wells Fargo" yesterday began the second week of its repeat engagement on the screen at the Metropolitan Theater.

In this epic subject, Frank Lloyd, one of the cinema's most skillful directors in the manipulation of giant scenes peopled by thousands of players, has captured something of the far-flung impressiveness of a picturesque era in the history of the national development of the United States.

Primarily dedicated to the important part played by the express company from which the film derives its name in the penetration of a mighty wilderness by constantly accelerated means of transport and communication, Mr. Lloyd also has found it possible to bring in a touch of the War Between the States, epochal figures in history and other dramatic elements that transcend the imaginative figments of fictional narrative. There is an authenticity about the entire movement of the picture that lends the story an added measure of appeal.

The foremost roles are played by Joel McCrea, Frances Dee and Bob Burns. Burns here has one of the most fruitful opportunities he has enjoyed before the cameras, and Miss Dee acquits herself as a romantic heroine with rather more dramatic fiber than her earlier assignments might have suggested. Joel McCrea may rather be taken for granted in this sort of thing. He is ideally cast in his present part.

The new bill at the Metropolitan is completed by a varied array of short subjects and a new composite release of the combined newsreels.

Columbia

The overwhelming winds of "The Hurricane" are blowing through the Columbia Theater this week, where yesterday Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of the South Seas story by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall began a repeat engagement on F street.

This picture is unique among current releases in that it brings to the screen a man-made simulation of Nature in its angriest mood that really outdoes the wildest rampages of the natural elements. Preceding the melodramatic storm climax of the story, however, there is unfolded a romantic drama of opposing civilizations that would be impressive in itself without the added fillip of the sensational destruction of an entire Polynesian island by wind and sea.

In this primary story structure, Jon Hall proves himself one of the most valuable "finds" of the season as the young South Sea islander who rebelled against the legal restrictions placed upon his natural impulses by a relentless French governmental machine. Dorothy Lamour is the girl in the case—and a most attractive one—and contributory roles of utmost importance are played with their accustomed skill by C. Aubrey Smith, Mary Astor, Raymond Massey, Thomas Mitchell and a long list of others.

Short-reel subjects and a new issue of the "News of the Day" complete a program that may be recommended to all theatergoers with an eye to the unusual in the theater.

Dognaping.

When a dog steals a bone and buries it in a garden, it leads to all sorts of complications in "Bringing Up Baby," starring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant.

Human Drama Unfolds Itself At RKO-Keith's

'I Met My Love Again' Is Fine Vehicle for Fonda and Joan Bennett.

"I MET MY LOVE AGAIN." Walter Wanger's picturization of Allene Corliss' novel, "Summer Lightning," adapted to the screen by David Hertz, starring Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett, supported by Dame May Whitty, Louise Platt, Alan Marshall, Dorothy Stickney, Florence Lake, Tim Holt and Alan Baxter. Directed by Arthur Ripley and Joshua Logan. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

This is excellent and adult, moving and full of the real stuff of life. In this era of second-rate musicals and third-rate "goofy" comedies, it is a comfort to find a play which has a human problem and human beings to deal with it.

It is reminiscent, not in story, but in method and feeling, of that very fine picture of several seasons ago, "Tomorrow We Love," in which Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart played. This is interesting, for Mr. Stewart and Miss Sullavan are also members of that able group of young collegians from which came "Hank" Fonda, "Josh" Logan (codirector of "I Met My Love Again"), and, we believe, Miss Platt, the exciting young newcomer in this cast. Evidently these people learned the right lessons and learned them well, for both pictures are touched with truth and full of the most complete and accurate character portrayals we have seen in motion pictures.

The current picture concerns itself with Ives and Julie, who are in love. Ives has his name and way to make and so they wait quietly, dully in their narrow little New England town. That is, they wait for two years and then Julie suddenly elopes with Michael Shaw, a worthless young writer whom she has just met, leaving Ives to loneliness and the mercy of chattering tongues. The marriage, a bitter failure, drags along for 10 years until Michael dies in Paris and Julie comes home to an unchanged town but a changed Ives.

Are Honest Characters.

This bare outline does not give even a suggestion of the complete naturalness and the honesty of the characters, their thoughts, their words. They act like real people, talk like real people, and the things that happen to them happen, for the most part, as things do.

There are complications, mostly human—Ives' nagging mother, the gossip of the town felt, though not seen, a rich college girl who hypnotizes herself into loving Ives, and Ives and Julie themselves, and their twisted, hurt, uncertain emotions. There are moments that virge on melodrama—the drink-throwing episode and the wild last-minute ride, but even these are conditioned and made somewhat credible by the situations leading up to them and the persons involved.

There are a number of notable things about this picture—the fiery assured debut of Louise Platt, as the college girl; the touching, simple, clear performance of Henry Fonda as Ives; the understanding in Joan Bennett's performance; Dame May Whitty's sincerity, and above all, the completely rounded characterizations of the entire cast.

Miss Platt starred in "Spring Dance," Phil Barry's short-lived play of two seasons' ago. She is rather like Hepburn in appearance, a little too sure of herself, though that may be in the role, but definitely a person to be reckoned with.

Henry Fonda is one of our favorite people as well as favorite actors. As Ives, he plays with humor, surety, force and appeal, giving us a four-square person.

Is Splendidly Cast.

Dorothy Stickney, Florence Lake and Alan Baxter add greatly as Ives' nagging family; Miss Stickney particularly as the mother, who completely destroys her own ends through constantly over-reaching herself. A part not really overdone. Baxter, usually a gangster, is surprisingly good as a small-town Vermonter.

Alan Marshall has the hardest job in the play as Michael, for he must handle lines, over-precious and whimsical. He proves them proper and fitting to his character, for which he should have high praise.

As you may have guessed, we like the picture very much, indeed.

Ted Fio-Rito's short with an amusing plot, the Pathe Newsreel, and that blessed Donald Duck, held over in "Donald Duck's Self-Control," complete a bill notable for a feature of point and meaning.

Trans-Lux

Thirty-five minutes of exciting newsreels, plus the much-heralded "Inside Nazi Germany — 1938," March of Time, send off the Trans-Lux Theater bill this week as one of the best, if not the best, since this interesting theater opened its doors last year. This March of Time feature enlightens the audience upon the tremendous propaganda being machined by Hitler.

The continuity of the news portion of the show has everything from the lost New York-to-Washington airliner, arriving safe at Hartford, Conn., to bathing beauties, prize fighters and the terrific ice jam at Niagara Falls. Then for diversion we see Justice Reed acknowledging his court appointment and Il Duce's son on his record flight from Italy to Rio.

One of the most unusual and fascinating shorts to be seen at the Trans-Lux Theater is the one entitled "Jungle Juveniles." Here is an adorable blond-haired boy who forms a real friendship with two chimpanzees, the result being one of the most unusual and clever bits of movie recording in a long time.

This always enjoyable program would not be complete without the Disney cartoon in color. This time it is an extremely likable one, "On Ice," with Donald Duck doing the honors.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Married Three Years, Young Woman's Husband Shows Marked Interest in Waitress; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am nearly 21 and my husband is two years older. We have been married for three years. I love my husband and I feel confident he loves me; but he has a terrible habit of gambling and also meets many people whom he claims to feel sorry for. Recently he met, at the lunch room where he customarily eats, a waitress whom he talked about continuously. On a certain holiday, when I had to work but he didn't, he spoke of her, saying he felt sorry for her, and believed he would take her to a certain entertainment, since I couldn't go. His sad story of her life made me sympathetic and I said, "Why not? I suppose it's all right," never once distrusting him.

* * * *

Since then I find he gave her candy for Christmas and also has seen her several times at her apartment. She is 17 and even though she is younger than I am, she can't compare with me. She is the type that takes all and gives nothing. My husband and I belong to a bowling team and each time we go she breaks her neck to be with him, and vice versa. Having become distrustful of her, I asked her how she feels about my husband and she said, "I like him; that's all," I have told my husband if he wants her, in preference to me, just to say so. But he won't separate because he knows his mother would take his share of the house we are buying.

* * * *

I work and pay my share of all our expenses, and I don't see why I should be tormented with this waitress. We have no children. If things continue this way, I feel it would be better to leave him now than later. Please advise me at your earliest convenience. Very truly yours,
TROUBLED.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR TROUBLED: Your husband isn't a very admirable character, to say the least. However, in treating himself to an extra-marital flirtation (or even a passing love affair) with an addle-pated female, he is pursuing a pattern of conduct that seems to be popular with a distressing number of married men, both young and not-so-young. In my opinion the waitress in herself doesn't constitute a serious threat to your marriage; your husband probably hasn't the faintest intention of, or desire to, set her up in your place; but in publicly showering attentions upon a girl who cannot compare with you in attractiveness, intelligence and sterling qualities of character, he is offering you an insult that would be hard for any woman to swallow.

* * * *

Still, if you really care for him and he cares for you as much as he honestly can care for any woman; and if his weakness for gambling isn't indulged to the point of playing havoc with your budget, you might steel yourself to the current flirtation, consoling yourself with the thought that it will run its course in time. You may as well face the fact, however, that his type of man will always either be seeking, or yearning for, diversion with other women. He just isn't civilized up to the point of appreciating the dignity, beauty and social worth of monogamous devotion. He doesn't understand the natural law of compensation, whereby you pay for everything you get. If he wants to make his marriage a success, he has to forswear light love affairs with other women, for one thing. And if he must have polygamous variety in his life, then he cannot hope for a successful marriage and a devoted wife of any real intelligence.

* * * *

Since there is this strain of weakness and blindness in his make-up, no harm will be done in bringing this situation to a show-down right now, if you wish to do so. Just give him clearly to understand you will not tolerate such cheap conduct; that you regard it as an insult to yourself; and that he can choose between the high road of loyalty, plus your companionship, or the low road of infidelity—technical or spiritual—which means he will have to do without you. If such a challenge doesn't promote a change in his conduct, you might as well separate from him, supposing you are the sort of woman who cannot meekly endure a cheaply flirtatious man as a husband. Some women can, and will, put up with such husbands. Others won't. It depends on which type of woman you are, as to what you should do.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Kidney Stone Cause.

I am frequently asked whether diet has anything to do with the formation of kidney stones, and whether any diet will prevent their formation.

A great many different ideas have been held in the past on this subject. The medical profession, in general, is pretty skeptical of the value of any of them. Certainly they have been pretty unscientific. Thus tomatoes have been supposed to cause kidney stones, but there is no basis for such a belief. Meat is also incriminated.

The nearest approach to a scientific view of the matter has been advanced by a Cleveland physician, eminent in the field of urology. He points out that there is a geographical distribution of kidney stones. They are extremely frequent, for instance, in India and extremely infrequent in Normandy. There are stone areas which were mapped out long ago in Great Britain.

This physician also points out that the frequency of stone in children has greatly decreased over what it was 75 years ago. Carefully made compartive statistics of London hospitals show this decrease. He ascribes it to the improvement in the nutrition of children, which has been marked in the last few years, especially in the matter of a diet high in vitamins. Experimentally it has been found that rats who are deprived of Vitamin A have, among other things, a very high incidence of kidney stones.

Three Factors Present.

On this basis we may reason that kidney stones are due to three factors: first, an alkaline urine; second, keratinization or hardening of the cells of the pelvis of the kidney, and, third, infection. We knew that Vitamin A has something to do with all of these things; that Vitamin A alone will change an alkaline to an acid urine (which is what it ought to be normally), will reduce keratinization and help to prevent infection.

A diet high in Vitamin A, which is also high in acid-ash, is possibly one which will prevent kidney stones. No one, of course, can live on such a diet all his life, but those who are subject to stones and have had one operation may go on this diet as a trial.

Acid-ash foods are as follows: white bread, whole wheat bread, sweet dried corn, crackers, cranberries, eggs, egg white, egg yolk, fish—haddock and pike—lean beef, chicken, frog, lean pork, rabbit, veal, oysters, oatmeal, peanuts, prunes, plums and rice.

Three Distinctve New Headlines

Here are three distinctive versions of the popular upswept coiffure as designed by Gilbo, Washington representative of M. Guillaume, of Paris. At top, long flat curls reminiscent of the old-fashioned French roll give sophisticated headlines. The center hair-do, stressing simplicity, is equally appropriate for day or evening. For formal evening, the quaintly smart arrangement of curls atop the head is delightfully expressed in the coiffure at bottom of sketch.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE catch to most French furniture is that it would take such a lot of living up to. A lady with an average American home couldn't begin to keep those delicate brocades and pale rugs looking presentable, not to mention the slender fragility of so many of the chairs and settees. Just picture haw long they'd last with a former halfback tilting on their rear legs! They were made for satin-clad courtiers living in palaces.

And yet, there's no denying the fact that French furniture has grace and graciousness. The answer those who do like the rhythmic lines of French furniture, but don't have a royal menage to put it in, is French provincial furniture. This was the everyday furniture of eighteenth century France, for not all men were kings or dukes, even in those days. The provinces of France developed a type of furniture that copied the gilded pieces of the court, but in more substantial lines, in simpler woods, in practical coverings. This French provincial furniture has great charm and suitability for the average American home.

If you're looking for a type of furniture that is gracious and beautiful, yet not "done to death," go to your favorite store and see what they have in French provincial.

New Coiffures Required With Spring Styles

Hats Match Upswept Arrangement of Hair With Flat Curls.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

HOW can you wear the new short skirts, abbreviated boleros and new old-fashioned clothes with a last year's coiffure? You can't! Much has been said and written about the unswept coiffure, with flat curls piled high on the head, ears exposed and a classic neckline. According to Gilbo, Washington representative of M. Guillaume, it not only climaxes all styles stressing femininity, but is absolutely imperative to accompany the new clothes for spring and next summer. Millinery is being styled to harmonize with hair arrangements, and with the Watteau coiffure as created by M. Guillaume gaining added popularity daily, the Watteau hat is again one of the most important hat trends in both tailored and formal versions.

M. Gilbo is stressing the practicability of coiffures which can be worn in the evening and then adapted to day wear by simple adjustment with brush and comb. The theme behind this artist's hair styling is naturalness, emphasized by soft and usually flat curls—no shadow waving. By this method hair can have that smart upswept trend, whether it is a long or a short bob. Combinations of the two lengths also fashion some of Gilbo's coiffures. For instance, the front cut short and worn high, and the back long and swirled—the back cut quite short and the front left long and curled in several large curls. Women who have been wearing the page boy bob can have the long hair as required by this styling, curled and swirled to give the impression of short locks.

Detail and Whites Mark Ornaments

Paris, (U.P.).—White composition masque buttons, pastel hands and mother of pearl and gold lions are novelty trims in Heim's midseason collection in which detail and white touches are features.

Black tailored furless coats are introduced for early spring wear. One gold afternoon coat is designed with a shoulder cape edged with Persian lamb. Fitting close about the arms with a tiny edging of the black fur, the cape may be turned up about the shoulders to make a cape collar with wide Persian lamb band.

A pastel blue wool suit is made with a hip pocket edged with beaver. Matching pairs of hands in composition are used as fastening at the waistline and to trim the half-belt across the back.

White masque buttons are used on a black tailored coat with fuschia revers edged in Persian lamb. A fuschia woolen dress with purple belt completes the ensemble.

Businessmen Offer Hints for Job Seekers

Advice to job-seekers: Mary Margaret McBride, C.B.S. air columnist, interviewed employers to find their reactions to the way applicants dress, and discovered that all executives favor trim, tailored outfits that look smart without being spectacular.

Suits and dark wools led the list, and the inevitable male favorite was dark blue with a touch of white. Many didn't care about colors. All agreed that run-down heels and runs in stockings are chalked up on the debit side, and that unbrushed clothes and hats are particularly offensive.

Natural Beauty Of Guatemalan Girls Stressed

U. S. Envoy Says Women There Do Not Constantly Seek Glamour Aids.

By Genevieve Reynolds.

AMERICAN women who are tired of striving for glamour might do well to emigrate to Guatemala.

Women of that Central American country not yet beauty conscious, are not constantly seeking for and experimenting with new beauty aids to increase their natural charm, reports Fay Allen Des Portes, United States Minister to Guatemala, who has just returned to his post after a month's stay in Washington.

However, despite this apparent lack of concern, Guatemalan women are the epitome of glamorous beauty with extraordinarily graceful figures, according to Mr. Des Portes, and while they do not bother to diet—much less talk about it—they have no superfluous pounds of fat to worry about.

"Have Natural Beauty."

"Both the native Indian and the pure Spanish women have great natural beauty and charm which they accept as a matter of course without conceit," said the American Minister. "But like the American women and those of all other countries in Europe and South America that I have visited, they are primarily concerned with the inherent charm that attracts the opposite sex."

Mr. Des Portes attributes much of the charm of Guatemala women to their unusually clear complexions and graceful figures, which he believes are due largely to their diet, which is mainly fruits and vegetables, and their steady exercise regime.

"Native exercises," he explained, "are natural rather than the artificial gymnastic variety. The native Indian women get their exercises by working and dancing. Nearly all of these women walk from 30 to 50 miles a day carrying large packs on their heads. And by balancing these bundles they develop excellent bodily co-ordination and are therefore very graceful in all their movements. Much of their rhythm comes through dancing that exercises the entire body and makes for greater fluidity of action."

Dancing Is Popular.

The exercise regime of the native Spanish women consists of dancing and sports similar to those in America. And while they adopt the American dances they excel in the difficult rhumba and tango, he said.

"I believe," he said, "that much of their gracefulness is due to their dancing, which is begun as very small children, and to their unusual activity in sports."

Although the Spanish women wear American and Paris made clothes with much style they do not lose their individuality by slavish imitation. Neither do they ape the mannerisms of popular cinema stars, but preserve their own characteristic gesture and expressions, Mr. Des Portes declared.

Retain Individuality.

"In spite of wearing tribal costumes," he explained, "the Indian women retain their individuality by wearing beautiful, gay colors and ornaments that set off to advantage their natural beauty.

Growing old does not seem to worry these women. They obviously accept it as a matter of course rather than fight it off with an array of cosmetics.

"And besides the assets of natural grace and beauty, these women have soft-speaking voices, a gracious, frank and friendly manner that manifests itself in their high regard and good will toward all Americans and to those of the United States in particular."

Spinach Favorite Vegetable of Boys, Survey Indicates

Spinach is the favorite vegetable of boys, but corn is the first choice of the girls, according to the results of a children's survey conducted by the Boys' Athletic League of New York City. The study was made to determine the preference of boys and girls between the ages of 6 and 16 in food, education, sports, radio, motion pictures and social life.

Both boys and girls listed turkey as their favorite meat. Hash was the second choice of the boys in the meat dishes, but girls dissented by selecting chicken as their second choice. Ice cream proved the big dessert favorite, especially with the girls.

While the majority of both sexes favor a college education, more boys than girls expressed a desire to enter college.

Boys would rather go to the movies than listen to the radio or read a book, but while the girls showed a liking for the movies they also liked to read more than the boys. Twenty-two per cent of the girls would rather read than listen to the radio, but 14 per cent would rather read than go to the movies.

Joe Penner was voted the most popular radio star by both boys and girls, but taste differed among the motion pictures favorites. Buck Jones was the boys first choice and Shirley Temple and Jane Withers tied for first place among the girls.

Lingerie Washing Has Six Points

There are six requirements for the proper laundering of lingerie. The first is water temperature, which should never be above body heat. The second is abundance of suds, which should always be rich and bubbling. The third is gentle handling, which means dipping the garments in and out of the suds with a gentle suction and avoidance of all rubbing, twisting, wringing. The fourth is thorough rinsing—at least three waters, of body temperature. The fifth is squeezing out water without twisting the fibers, and the sixth is drying by a quick roll in a heavy towel, a quick shake and then hanging the garment over the line only long enough to evaporate a part of the water.

For the best results, the ironing should be done while the garment is still damp. This is much better than letting the slip or gown dry completely, then re-dampening, rolling and ironing, because it avoids the possibility of spottiness which the dampening and rolling may bring about.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

EVERY CITY has its pet squawk, and the lucky ones have ten or a dozen. To those of us whose business takes us up and down the screaming narrow lanes of mid-town Manhattan every day, there is just one thing on which we vent our worst language, and that is the traffic, motionless, or merely crawling, which fills these frantic streets from curb to curb.

ALICE HUGHES

Dozens of nervous collapses among women are caused weekly by this appalling condition. Perhaps we women drivers tend to be impatient and high strung, anyway, quick on the horn when hampered. I feel that a year or two more of it will give me a face like a relief map of Colorado, all ups and downs. For the past several years, as things have grown rapidly worse, we have kept up a continual howl of "Why don't they do something about this blank and asterisk traffic? Well, now they have—and we wonder if we like it!

What our able police chief, Comrade Valentine, decided to do was to ban parking entirely on ten of the key side streets in the midtown area, so that on them, at least, people in a rush could count on scooting through at racing speed. This is now being tried, with little confusion but considerable ire on the part of citizens who want to stop "just a second, officer!" That gets them a $2 ticket, whatever their story! Huge poky trucks, our greatest curse, are being coerced into working between midnight and dawn. Good trick—if done!

Those streets are my beat. I'm the shopping cop of midtown. I don't know. Do I prefer to dawdle slowly across the island, inviting apoplexy and hell fire, and losing a half hour. Or would I rather paddle through slush an extra block or two, as under the new rulings? I'm half inclined to give it all up!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Checking the wedding presents received by Silvia Gould at her marriage to Mr. Thomson, of Cincinnati—and who should rake in elegant loot if not a Gould, pray—I found a beauteous and extra complete set of silver from the bride's parents, but only three clocks in the lot! That's a very disappointing haul of ornate time-tickers for such a fancy marriage, and if I were the fair Silvia I'd go into the sulks! . . .

It is reported here, for no particular reason, that Eileen Gillespie, the pretty girl once engaged to John Jacob Astor, has never seen the inside of a night club! What's the matter with those stylish young men, anyway, or maybe la belle Eileen doesn't think she'd like night clubs. Anyhow it's a phenomenon of a minor type . . .

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

You May Grow Fat and Still Be Malnourished; Take Your Vitamins!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Weight to the contrary, you may be malnourished, for you can get fat on a diet that is lacking in the protective food elements. Overweight means you have taken so many fats, sugars and starches that some of them have been stored as adipose tissue, but the minerals and vitamins cannot be stored.

The average diet is high in calories and low in protective foods and the twin results are overweight and a lack of resistance. A daily dietary of toast and coffee for breakfast, a sandwich and coffee for lunch, and meat, potatoes, a vegetable, bread, butter and dessert for dinner supplies plenty of calories and perhaps some to spare. It is deficient, however, in the vitamins and minerals that promote optimum health.

If you catch cold easily, suffer from frequent headaches and feel tired most of the time, something important is missing from your diet. Unless you are underweight it obviously is not calories.

Capsules Avoidable.

You do not catch cold with every change of weather when your menu is reinforced with Vitamin A. This vitamin is supplied liberally in a number of foods and in concentrated capsules. (These capsules will not make you fat—they don't contain enough calories to add to your weight.) Vitamin A capsules may be purchased at any drug store.

For the time, you overweights need not worry about Vitamin B1, since it stimulates normal appetite and promotes functioning of nerve tissue. Whole wheat bread, which furnishes about 15 times as much of this vitamin as white bread, is always included in the reducer's diet. Vitamin B2, also known as Vitamin G, is necessary for the prevention of a certain form of dermatitis. The richest known sources are liver, kidney and brewer's yeast. According to one recognized authority, milk is also one of the valuable sources of Vitamin G.

Vitamin C, as you probably know, is furnished in orange juice, tomato juice and all citrous fruits. It does almost all the things for you that it is advertised to do! What you may not realize is that Vitamin C is necessary for the utilization of calcium. You need this vitamin daily for your bones, teeth and disposition.

Vitamin A capsules won't make you fat.

It is true that the average person gets too few vitamins and minerals and too many calories. Cut down on the sugar and starches and eat more fruits, vegetables and milk to decrease the calories and increase the protective foods. You can look and feel twice as well on half as many calories—and twice as many vitamins!

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

SO FAR Washington society seems to be untouched by the mad, mad craze for winter sports, and those who can get away from it all still prefer coral strands to any icy mountains. Most of those who have reached the ripe age of, say, 30, head for points South and leave the North to those who really like to get up early and bounce down snow-covered mountains.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss will sail today for a 64-day cruise on the Gripsholm, which they will abandon in South America long enough for a trip to the Chilean lakes. Also outward-bound from New York are Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, now on the Santa Rose en route to the West Indies and ports in Colombia and Venezuela.

CLARENCE HEWES, who was to have accompanied the Auchinclosses, found at the last moment he could not get good reservations. So by way of consolation he will be off February 15 for Palm Beach, and will pay a visit to his home in New Orleans before returning to the Capital in March.

It is predicted that there will be wailing and gnashing of teeth among hostesses here when "Buzzy" departs, as he not only is an "extra man," but one of the most constantly in demand. He is entertaining at a luncheon today in honor of Mrs. Jorge Boyd, attractive niece of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and sister-in-law of Augusto Boyd, Panamanian Minister. She is staying at the Brighton while in Washington with her mother this winter.

FOR THOSE OF US who are left behind, there will be parties, parties and more parties. Mrs. Letts is the mother of Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador.

A cocktail party scheduled for tomorrow is that at which Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., will be hostess. On Monday evening the Belgian Ambassador and the beautiful Countess van der Straten Ponthoz are giving a dinner, and, to skip way up to the middle of next month, the Secretary and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., have a similar entertainment scheduled for February 14.

The same day Dr. Jacob Gould Schurmann has reserved a table at Pierre's, where he will entertain several friends . . . February 10 is the night chosen by the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler for a dinner, and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose will entertain the previous evening at the Shoreham, where she makes her home.

* * * *

THE NEWLY-APPOINTED Associate Justice of the Supreme Court and Mrs. Stanley Reed will be feted within an inch of their lives by numerous friends in a congratulatory mood. The chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Mrs. Jesse Jones will give a dinner for them Wednesday at the Shoreham.

Another dinner with an official angle is that which Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., plan for February 7 in honor of the Senate Majority Leader and Mrs. Alben Barkley. The Roberts—he is secretary of the Democratic National Committee—are in Palm Beach as guests of the Stotesburys.

That same evening there will be a gathering at the 1925 F Street Club when Mrs. Cary Langhorne entertains at dinner. Democracy Is Subject Of Mrs. Harper Sibley

Our Own Materialism Its Principal Threat, Not Invasion From Abroad, She Tells Woman's Council of Federation.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Democracy is not threatened by someone who may come to our shores in a steamer to pull it down, but by our own materialism, Mrs. Harper Sibley told the 700 members of the Women's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches at their annual luncheon in Calvary Baptist Church yesterday.

"Until we can re-establish the Christian conception of the value of God and man, from which democracy sprang, there is no use shouting about the dangers which threaten it," she asserted. "The Christian conception of brotherhood is not 'I am as good as anybody else,' but 'everybody else is as good as I am.'

"Only when material things are dedicated to the welfare of mankind can it be called progress. If we are to save our souls as a nation, it will be only as we spend our efforts in achieving for others the same measure of abundance we enjoy. It is greatly disturbing to me that in this country I can find few places where we are less material than the dialectic materialism of Karl Marx.

Need Constructive Thought Before Action

"What we need more than endless action is people who can think big thoughts—thoughts on which we may some day act. The country which goes into deliberation with other countries and comes out with more than it gives is sewing the seeds of future wars. The statesman who strikes that kind of a bargain is a traitor to his country."

Mrs. Sibley, who attended the meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce last summer as a delegate in place of her husband, the former president of the United States Chamber, described the attitude she found among church women of Germany. Talking guardedly with one German woman, she asked what church women would do when all the clergy and religious laymen had been arrested for their convictions. The answer was:

"We women of the German Church will carry on."

"I wonder whether we women in America realize the privilege of our freedom and the responsibility it places upon us?" Mrs. Sibley said.

Describing the deliberations of the Oxford Conference, which she also attended last summer, she pointed out that, "with faith in the common Father, as a basis for unity, we dared meet together and to disagree on certain subjects without fear." She looked forward to a united Christian world.

"A divided church has no message for a divided world," she declared.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel Introduces Speaker

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the council, presided. Mrs. Helen Turley, contralto, set the theme of the afternoon with her song, "How Beautiful Upon the Mountain." She was accompanied at the piano by Miss Mary Camm. Dr. Horace Cromer, president of the Washington Federation of Churches, asked the invocation, and Dr. W. L. Darby pronounced the benediction.

Mrs. Wilson Compton had charge of the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. Fannie Foster, Mrs. J. R. Hardesty, Mrs. H. M. Kendrick, Mrs. George A. Ross and Mrs. W. N. Streeter.

A large, low bouquet of spring flowers decorated the head table, and the programs further carried out the suggestion of spring with hand-painted jonquils on a green background.

At the table with the president were Mrs. Compton and her committee, Mrs. J. Elmer Morgan, Mrs. H. C. Briscoe, Dr. William S. Abernathy, Mrs. W. O. Tuffs, Mrs. J. C. Keiper, Miss A. Barbara Wiegand, Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton and Mrs. E. M. Reese.

Antivivisection Fight Explained At Enos' Dinner

Advocates of Humane Bill Guests at Function in Capital.

Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno last night entertained at dinner a group of prominent physicians who are in Washington in the interest of the antivivisection bill now before Congress. Following the dinner there was a small reception at which Dr. William H. Hay, author of the famous Hay diet, talked informally, giving the reasons behind their support of the bill.

Many of the guests, though not all of them, were members of the group of Washingtonians organized in support of the antivivisection measure, and several members of Congress also were present.

"If I knew one disease which had been prevented or cured as a result of vivisection, I would keep still for the sake of that one disease," said Dr. Hay, "but I do not know of one. Nothing outsanding for the benefit of the human race has ever been learned through that method and 90 per cent of the experimentation is done only for demonstration to students and not for actual research."

Research would not suffer through the prohibition of vivisection but would take another slant much more beneficial to the human race, Dr. Hay declared.

He said that from 4,000 to 5,000 dogs a year are cut up without mercy.

Dr. Hay expressed the opinion that the bill should be modified to permit experimentation in nutrition on animals, which could be done, he said entirely without cruelty and with profit in the field of research.

With Dr. Hay as guest of honor at the dinner, were Dr. Millicent Morden, of Brooklyn; Dr. David Freundlich, Dr. H. E. Latham and Dr. A. C. Moorhead.

The group did not come to the Capital as dog-lovers, seeking passage of the bill because of a sentimental attachment to their pets, it was explained, but as members of a profession designed to relieve suffering who were raising their voice against a practice of ruthless cruelty unfruitful in the field of science.

Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. William H. King, Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. George Barnett, the Misses Mary and Elizabeth Howry, who have been among the leaders in the anti-vivisection campaign in the District of Columbia; Miss Mae Helm, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, who came in following the dinner at the Woman's National Democratic Club, of which Mrs. Hubbard is president; Senator and Mrs. John H. Overton, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Representative Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative and Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, Mrs. George Oakley Totten, Representative James L. Quinn, Representative Don Gingery, and Col. Reginald Foster.

Sorority Gives 4th Study Fund

Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority is offering for the fourth consecutive year $1,500 in graduate fellowships, available to any woman student not over 30 years of age who has or will receive before next July, her bachelor's degree from an institution in which a chapter of this women's fraternity is located.

Mrs. F. A. Rothballer is president of the alumnae chapter here and both George Washington and Maryland Universities have active chapters.

The $1,500 is divided into three fellowships of $500 each, which are awarded regardless of fraternity or non-fraternity membership. During the three years Kappa has given them, two have gone to non-fraternity women, one of whom was aided for two years; a third to a member of Alpha Xi Delta.

Although there is no stipulation as to the course of graduate study or the institution in which it is to be pursued, the applicant for fellowship is expected to explain definitely what her work is to be and the use she intends to make of it.

Character, personality and ability testimonials, as well as scholastic and extra-curricular history of the student, must accompany all applications.

Application blanks are available in the office of the dean of women at George Washington. They must be in the hands of the Kappa fellowship chairman by March 25.

Fellowship holders this year are Dorothy Gies from the University of Michigan, who is doing research on the feminist movement in literature at the University of London; Annette Dods of Ohio State, who is studying personnel psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, and Paula Bassett, specializing in juvenile court work at the New York School of Social Work.

In addition to those fellowships-at-large, Kappa maintains within the fraternity a foreign student exchange fellowship and a series of $250 undergraduate scholarships for Kappa upperclassmen. Seven of the latter were awarded this year.

The exchange fellowship, inaugurated last fall, offers free board and room—and in most cases the waiving of tuition—to foreign students in exchange for the same privilege for Kappas studying abroad.

Applications for this fellowship must be made by February 1.

Brent Clark, living at the Cordova; Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler, vice president of the D. C. League of American Pen Women, and Mrs. David J. Rumbaugh, daughter of Gen. Among those present at the board meeting were Mrs. John J. Myers, of Washington, who, with Mrs. Jones, is both an honorary national president and a councilor for life; Mrs. Grace L. H. Broseau, vice president, and Mrs. Louis Sanborn Leonard, chaplain, of New York; Mrs. Gory Hogg, recording secretary, of West Virginia; Miss Bessie Porter, national registrar, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Samuel B. Lady Astor Says Britain And U.S. Must Co-operate Solidarity Essential to World Peace, She Tells Congressional Club Women on Program With Mrs. Strickler.

Lady Astor yesterday afternoon was guest of honor and speaker at the Congressional Club, declaring that Great Britain and this country—whether they like it or not—must stand together, as guardians of world law and order. She was introduced by Mrs. Ralph Church, and shared the program with Mrs. Thomas J. Strickler, of Kansas City, coloratura soprano and guest artist for the musicale.

"If I were the devil and wanted to ruin civilization, I would break up the British Empire and make the United States still regard Great Britain as its traditional enemy, said Lady Astor. "I do not want the two countries to be strong because of war, but because of peace" she said. "The League of Nations is an ideal but not a fact. It doesn't work; it is only a league of some of the nations, because half of those who joined had no faith in it.

"If we could get rid of war by sinking the British navy, I'd be in favor of it; but instead it would mean chaos and world disorder. I have told the pacifist women: If you want peace, be strong; if you don't want peace, be weak."

Lady Astor declared that free women should have their say in a free government and that no government in which women have not the vote can call itself a democracy.

"Don't work through your husbands, but beyond them," she said. "Women have more moral courage than men. I feel, as a member of the British Parliament, that I am not just representing women of Great Britain, but all women here at home. We all want a better world—a clean, moral, peaceful world. If Great Britain and the United States worked together to this end the rest of the world couldn't do anything to stop it."

Forty-two years ago, when she first discussed the subject with Lord Balfour, who loved America, she said he declared it of greatest importance among nations that Great Britain and the United States cooperate for world peace.

Meeting the argument of irritating characteristics the British find in Americans and vice versa, she told of an American who remarked it was "very tiresome to have the English coming over here with superior airs."

"It's very tiresome to have Americans spittin' and chewin' and saying they're goin' to buy the Island," she answered.

No country could have given a better welcome to an alien-born than she received in England, she said, and it is never used against her in politics.

Once, when it was said she was "half-American" she retorted: "That is wrong; I'm wholly a Virginian. I was born a Virginian, I'll die a Virginian and I wouldn't represent you Devonshire people if you didn't remind me of Virginians."

Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the Congressional Club, opened the meeting and Mrs. Church introduced Mrs. Strickler, who sang before Lady Astor arrived and following her talk. There was a large audience present, as Mrs. Strickler has won friends in other appearances in Washington, both at the Congressional Club and at the Seventy-third Club's luncheon last year honoring Mrs. Roosevelt.

She was accompanied by Clayton Lindsay, flutist, and Louis Guzman, pianist, in a program including numbers by Mozart, Bizet, Weber, Donizetti, Kountz, Sigurdlie and other composers.

POTSHOTS AT HOTSHOTS: One of the quaintest sights during the lynching bill filibuster was Senator Bilbo, diligently scratching his head and reading aloud comments by an intelligent Negro journalist. Might be called Exhibit Z for white supremacy.

One Senator estimates that Bilbo's speech incited ten votes against Dixie.

A rare parliamentary trick was used by Congressman Phillips of Connecticut in order to get a chance to attack the sale of helium to Germany . . . He moved an amendment to eliminate the Secretary of the Navy's $15,000 salary from the naval bill.

This gave him a chance to make his protest . . . Then he withdrew his amendment . . . It's called a "pro forma" amendment; just a matter of form.

"—bad manners in the House"

A lady from the West attracted quite a bit of attention at the last big White House dinner . . . She kept a small notebook in her lap, looked at the labels on the bottoms of dishes, counted the number of flowers in bouquets, watched every move like a hawk and kept jotting down notes surreptitiously in her lap, about the Roosevelts, food, people, chatter and service. Apparently Mrs. Roosevelt wasn't noticing it.

Mrs. Roosevelt.

Finally the curiosity of the next woman on her right became uncontrollable.

"Why are you taking all those notes?" she asked.

"Well," said the lady from the West, "I promised to give a talk to my club about this dinner, and I don't trust my memory; want everything straight."

The endless Army argument about the merits of airplanes vs. antiaircraft flared up in the House the other day with an elderly member taking the anti-aircraft side, and volatile young Representative Boileau, of Wisconsin, got his ears pinned back.

"I've seen 25 times as many airplanes in combat as my colleague," cried Boileau, jumping passionately to his feet.

"Yes," said the orator, "and that was 20 years ago!"

Quite a few fashionable Washington hostesses have their doormen keep careful count of the number of guests at their larger functions; they are equipped with little clickers in their palms.

This helps keep the refreshments flowing at the right rate and guards against running short should an unexpectedly large number of guests appear.

When 500 have been invited, food and drink are usually prepared for 300 or 350; rarely do more than that proportion show up, despite the gate crashers.

THIRD TERM SIGNS: Apparently President Roosevelt was in earnest when he said recently, at a full dress party, that he would enjoy himself more if dinner jackets had sufficed, because he wanted his dress suit to last him out the next two years.

He often appears in the less formal black tie when guests at smaller White House dinners wear white ties and tails. (Of course, he might celebrate a third term by purchasing a new evening suit!)

One Government bureau that doesn't get the bouquets it deserves is the Food and Drugs Administration under Henry Wallace . . . District Budget Is Given Scant Notice in House

Race Problem, National Defense Occupy Hours of General Debate.

By James D. Secrest.

For five hours yesterday members of the House talked of sealing wax, of cabbages and kings, with the President's national defense program, during what was supposed to be general debate on the District appropriations bill.

Only Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, took time to make a plea for an increase in unemployment relief, and Representative Bigelow (Democrat), of Ohio, reviewed his ideas on a single tax for Washington.

At no time was there more than a score of members on the floor as Representatives Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Engle (Republican), of Michigan, assigned time to their colleagues.

Collins predicted the bill would be passed Monday when the House reconvened. He plans to make a speech in support of the sub-committee's report, with especial reference to relief appropriations.

The sub-committee chairman jumped to the defense of the bill yesterday when Voorhis charged that "there are hundreds of people in Washington who can't get any relief whatsoever."

Collins retorted that the sub-committee was recommending the same aggregate amount for relief this year as Congress voted last year—$2,280,140.

"And yet the District welfare officials testified that they had 566 less cases in December than they did last July," he added.

While the amount recommended for direct unemployment relief was less in the 1939 supply bill than in the current appropriations act, Collins said the difference was made up by increases in social security benefits reducing the unemployment relief load.

It was learned, meanwhile, that representatives of private welfare agencies likely would appeal to the District Commissioners next week to take the lead in settling relief problems here. They are expected to demand that the Commissioners ask Congress for a $2,000,000 increase in the 1939 supply bill to afford $2,900,000 for relief or, that failing, that the Commissioners should direct a door-to-door canvass to raise $2,000,000.

A request also was expected that Congress investigate to determine if the Board of Public Welfare was justified in making its original estimate of $3,247,750 in 1939. It was hinted newspaper advertisements might be used to bring the matter before Congress and citizens.

Voorhis protested the closing of the National Training School for Girls and the Children's Receiving Home. When he cited the report that the girls would be transferred to the District Reformatory at Lorton, Collins said he understood they would be sent to Blue Plains, where the District operates an industrial school for colored children.

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, broke in to protest the sub-committee's allocation of $10,000 to the Metropolitan Police Department for undercover work.

"This sub-committee is recommending an appropriation of $10,000 to pay stool pigeons—the lowest form of humanity—and yet makes no provision for hungry children," he charged.

For the remainder of the five hours members took time to discuss national defense, the Sherman anti-trust act, the race problem in the south, industrial taxes, etc.

Burglar Eats Ham, But Dog Barks as He Goes for Cash

Pinto proved true to his police dog ancestors early yesterday when his barking routed a burglar from the home of his master. Adolphus Eggleton, 805 Euclid street northwest.

Pinto's barking woke Mrs. Eggleton just as the burglar appeared in her bedroom and reached for her pocketbook. She screamed, and the burglar disappeared into the night, dropping more than $20 in his hurry.

Eggleton last night admitted that Pinto allowed the burglar to eat most of a ham before he started barking. He took $18, a watch, pair of pants and shirt from Alphonso Hallbach, a boarder; a scarf and pair of gloves from Eggleton.

In exchange, he left his own hat, a dark brown, size 7¾.

House Committee Listens to Arguments Pro and Con on Measure.

The District small claims bill was indorsed and assailed yesterday at a House subcommittee hearing, but even its critics were forced to admit they favor the proposal "in principle."

Mrs. Helen D. Hoffman, director of the Washington Housing Association, stated that a special committee of her organization had investigated the plan and approved it.

She predicted that the court would be invaluable in adjusting disputes between landlords and tenants and she said that the voluntary arbitration provision is especially commendable.

Leonard J. Gantz and J. Barrett Carter, spokesmen for the District Bar Association, attacked the bill and predicted it would make a collection agency of the court and rob it of its judicial functions.

After they stated the bar association had gone on record opposing the measure, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, challenged the association's vote on the ground that a quorum was not present when the action was taken.

Carter said 400 lawyers were present when the action was taken and all but 40 approved the denunciatory resolution. He said the association has 1,254 members.

Both lawyers admitted under questioning that they and the bar association favored the small claims court proposal "in principle".

The subcommittee recessed the hearing until Monday morning, while members privately predicted that the bill will be reported favorably though with some amendments.

One-Legged Thief Honored When 12 Police Seize Him

The world must look rosy to a 21-year-old man this morning, even if he is seeing it through the bars of First Precinct Station. It's not often a one-legged man may boast of capture by a dozen policemen.

Private A. T. Engstrom, of First Precinct, walking his second shift of the day, saw a dim figure moving inside 232 First street northwest. Under orders to watch the place carefully because of 12 burglaries there in two months, Engstrom hailed a passing driver and told him to call the patrol wagon. The hacker exceeded his instructions to the extent of reporting a policeman in trouble.

Citizens Back Increase Here In Police Force

Crime Causes Discussed by Federation of Civic Associations.

An enlarged police force for the District was indorsed last night by the Federation of Civic Associations and re-establishment of the old Second Precinct was supported.

Charles M. Thomas, president, said a poll of colored high school pupil had indicted causes of crime to be a general breakdown in religious influences, dissipation of home life because of economic and moral influences, an oppression psychosis caused by attitudes of enforcement officers, unemployment and influx of irresponsible persons.

A committee was ordered appointed to consider juvenile delinquency, the housing situation as it related to crime, and the responsibility of home and school.

A protest was directed to be sent to the President of discrimination in the Government service against colored workers.

Suffrage and proposed bills for re-establishment of the franchise were made the subject of special study and report at the February meeting.

Approval of changes in the law regulating small loans in the District was voted. The federation also approved, in principle, legislation favoring sabbatical leave for educational employes.

Purchase of land for the creation of Watts Run Parkway was approved, and city-wide program for larger and more regular attendance at night schools and community centers was undertaken.

F.B.I. Graduate Assistant Chief For Montgomery

Sergt. James S. McAuliffe, F. B. I. school graduate, will be assistant chief of the Montgomery County police, title or no, Chief J. William Garnett told members of the force at a conference in Rockville yesterday. Present at the conference was Police Commissioner Frank H. Karn.

"When I'm not present, he's boss," announced the chief. "His orders are my orders."

Stricter rules and regulations were laid down for the police. There will be no visiting on duty. The faintest whiff of liquor on their breath when they report for duty will be punished, and any officer drinking on duty will be brought up before the trial board. Sick leave will be curtailed. Men will be required to ask for time off 24 hours in advance. Unnecessary roughness will not be tolerated. Officers are to protect themselves to the utmost, however.

"But," concluded the chief, "I'm very proud of the force!"

Quipster Quinn Quits the District Group in House

Representative James I. Quinn (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, wise-cracking member of the House District Committee, yesterday resigned the assignment to take a place on the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Quinn, a former newspaper editor, was the sponsor of two bills, which have passed the House, to regulate beauty and barber shops in Washington.

Minimum Wage Law Is Held to Rule Out Tips

Employe Representative on Board Says Employers' Rates Specified.

A true interpretation of wording of the minimum wage law, which specifies "wages paid by employer," would eliminate consideration of tips in fixing a legal wage for women workers in hotels, restaurants and allied industries, Arthur L. Schoenthal, employe representative on the Minimum Wage Board, declared yesterday.

In the last public hearing before executive session Monday, members of the conference were further informed that many States do not include tips in their compensation insurance laws.

"These States," stated Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the board, "are Colorado, Kansas, New Jersey, New Mexico, Pennsylvania and Iowa."

Robert J. Wilson, business manager of the Washington Restaurant Association, declared he would submit briefs to the board outlining his contention that tips should be included in the minimum wage.

Several waitresses testified that publicity of previous testimony of "more fortunate waitresses whose tips run as high as $150 a month" has resulted in a decrease in tips.

"Why, I had a customer the other day, who always left a dime under his plate, tell me we were making more money than he was and he wouldn't leave a cent," one stated.

A member of the conference pointed out yesterday that waitresses in smaller restaurants have not appeared as frequently as those from larger eating places with the result that the public has a wrong impression on the tip situation.

"Many girls work in Washington restaurants," this member stated, "who don't make as much as a dollar a day in tips."

It is expected that a minimum wage will be decided upon by the board next week.

Women Voters Protest Senate Patronage Bill

Letter Sent to All Senators Objecting to McKellar Rider.

The National League of Women Voters yesterday took up the cudgels for an untrammeled merit system in a letter to all members of the Senate protesting patronage amendments of Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, to the independent offices appropriation bill.

Miss Margaret Wells, president, also sent out a call to State presidents to call the proposed amendment to the attention of every member league in the country. "If such provisions should be applied to the entire Government service, 23,000 units of patronage stand to be permanently added to the patronage system," she said.

The league broadside to Senators characterized the McKellar proposal as "calculated to destroy the civil service system as conceived in the civil service act passed 55 years ago." The proposal, the circular said, "is in direct opposition to the expressed will of the people and to both party platforms."

Miss Wells said of the proposal: "Its almost incredible provisions are that future appointments to independent agencies (such as the Federal Trade Commission, Interstate Commerce Commission, Social Security Board, and the like) carrying salaries of more than $4,000 be patronage appointments, i. e., made by the President and confirmed by the Senate."

Senate confirmation, the Senators were told, "in practice is the very negation of the nonpolitical merit system. Those who believe in the principle that partisanship would not influence the selection of public servants except those in policy-determining positions, must deplore any tendency in the Senate to assume the duty of selecting appointees for an increasing number of major positions. In so doing it undertakes a function which it is not by its nature constituted to perform."

Cost of Pensions Set at $84,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, told the House Pensions Committee yesterday that pensions proposed for widows and orphans of World War veterans would cost the Government $84,000,000 a year.

Gen. Hines spoke on the Gasque bill, which would grant $30 a month to widows or orphans of veterans even if death of the veteran was not due to war experience.

Meanwhile, Cornelius H. Bull, judge advocate of the American Veterans' Association, told the House Veterans' Affairs Committee he opposed any pension bill for disability contracted outside of service.

Theory Outlined Here on Activity Of Sulfanilamide

The theory that sulfanilamide, the new drug which is being used effectively in treatment of certain types of pneumonia, meningitis, gonorrhea and other germ diseases, acts by inhibiting growth of the guilty micro-organisms was outlined before a representative group of Washington physicians and research scientists yesterday.

Dr. Frederick P. Gay, professor of bacteriology at Columbia University medical school and widely known pathologist, presented his views before a seminar sponsored by George Washington University. The lecture was given at the local medical school.

Although the drug's effectiveness is already widely accepted, the way in which it brings about apparent cure is still rather a mystery to medical scientists. Dr. Gay believes that the chemical compound arrests development of the disease germs, notably the streptococcus, enabling the body cells to accumulate and dispose of the culprits.

Dr. Gay will speak on the same subject tonight before the Washington Academy of Medicine.

U. S. to Pay $1,818,786 For Plane Engine Fuel

The War Department yesterday awarded contracts for aircraft engine fuel totaling approximately $1,818,786 to 13 companies.

Recipients and the approximate totals of the awards they received were the Shell Union Oil Corporation, New York, $270,733; Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, New York, $197,309; Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., New York, $14,992.

Shell Oil Co., San Francisco, Calif., $410,852; Standard Oil Co. of California, San Francisco, Calif., $20,647; Richfield Oil Corporation, Los Angeles, Calif., $857, and the Shell Petroleum Corporation, St. Louis, Mo., $678,890.

Cabs Blamed For Big Part Of Auto Toll

Rep. Schulte Calls on Drivers to Organize for Safety.

Washington's 4,800 taxi drivers were blamed last night by Representative William Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, for a major portion of the city's tangled traffic problem.

He demanded a greater spirit of co-operation in the District's fight to save lives and reduce the mounting accident toll.

"You fellows," Schulte told 200 drivers at a meeting in the Labor Department auditorium, "are to blame for conditions in Washington. You haven't tried to co-operate. It has been a case of dog eat dog. We are going to insist that you obey the law and organize—regardless of company affiliations—for greater motoring safety."

In answer to the legislator's charge, spokesmen for the cabmen appealed for better working conditions—a limitation on the number of cabs, shorter hours and less police "interference."

The majority of Washington taxi drivers, said one speaker, are constantly "harassed" by the police department. He said policemen are "hardboiled" in their attitude toward drivers and don't give them a fair chance to earn a living.

"We are going to see to it," replied Schulte, "that the 'hardboiled' individuals are taken from both police department and taxi industry."

Promising to investigate the drivers' complaint, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, lauded the industry as a whole and said he "didn't understand how they made a living wage, anyway."

Schulte, chairman of a House subcommittee to investigate local traffic conditions, said:

"The streets belong to the citizens of the District, and we are going to make them safe. If the authorities charged with traffic control don't do their job, then we are going to insist they be removed. We want to know who is to blame and what is the cause.

"The committee is not going to tolerate anyone being killed by automobiles if it can be avoided. We are going to insist on co-operation from all who drive cars."

He pointed out that 11 of the 106 traffic fatalities last year were caused by taxis. The taxi record, however, was lauded by other speakers in view of the large number of miles traveled each year by vehicles for public hire.

To show the drivers that "it can be done," Schulte read the records of numerous cabmen who have been driving more than 20 years without either an arrest or serious mishap.

The following suggestions were offered by the drivers to improve working and safety conditions in the cab industry:

Reduction in the number of cabs; shorter hours; compulsory insurance; stricter enforcement of regulations requiring proper turns from proper lanes; elimination of downtown parking in the daytime; additional cab stands; an increased speed limit; less police interference; establishment of the meter system.

50 Years in Baseball

Griffith's Highlanders Lose American League Title to Boston Red Sox, Chesbro's Spit Ball Failing Him When Needed Most.

Chapter Fourteen.

NEW YORK WAS WILDLY ACCLAIMING Griffith's Highlanders in that final week of the 1904 season. They were in first place, a half game ahead of the Boston Red Sox, 1903 pennant winners. Only five games of the season remained . . . all against the Red Sox. It was to be a frenzied finish.

On Friday, October 9, the two teams met at the Hilltop grounds at 166th street and Broadway. Jack Chesbro spat on his fingers, took his spit-ball in hand, and pitched the Highlanders to victory in the first clash with the Boston Club. Griffith's New Yorkers now had a game lead. The pennant appeared won.

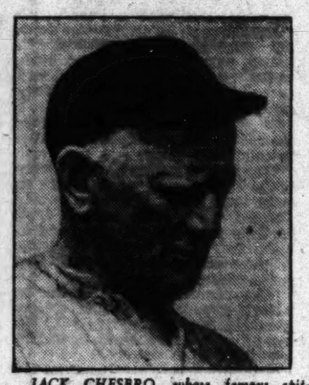

A double-header had been scheduled for the same grounds the following day. But, earlier in the season, Owner Frank Farell, of the Highlanders, had leased the team's grounds, for that date, to Columbia University, which had scheduled a football game. Farrell had not anticipated that Griffith's team would be in the pennant fight. The two games were transferred to Boston's Fenway Park.

Griffith had formed his pitching plans for the last four games with the Red Sox. Chesbro would not accompany the Highlanders to Boston; but would rest in New York to fit himself for duty in the final double-header, scheduled with the Boston club at New York the following Monday. Sunday baseball was not yet legal.

To Griffith's surprise, Chesbro appeared at the station as the Highlanders entrained for Boston. He wanted to make the trip. A delegation of his home-town fans at Conway, Mass., had planned to present him with a set of golf cuff links at Fenway Park the following day. He did not want to disappoint them. Griffith relented, permitted Chesbro to accompany the team.

Red Sox Take Double-Header and League Lead.

BIG JACK POWELL, FAST-BALLING right-hander with amazing stamina was to be Griffith's pitcher in the double-header at Boston. Griffith had planned for Powell to pitch both games, had faith in his ability to win both. On many occasions, during the 1904 season, Powell had pitched and won two two games in a single day.

JACK CHESBRO, whose famous spit-ball failed him in the all-important pinch.

Fifteen minutes before game time, Outfielder "Wee Willie" Keeler approached Manager Griffith, urged him to pitch Chesbro instead of Powell. Keeler declared that Chesbro "has a world of stuff in warm-up practice." Griffith shook his head. Powell was his choice. A few minutes later, "Kid" Elberfeld, captain of the Highlanders, rushed to Griffith with a report that "Chesbro is faster today than I've ever seen him." He, too, urged Chesbro as the pitching choice. But Griffith was committed to Powell, definitely. As game time neared, Powell, himself, agreed that Chesbro "looked great."

"Let me pitch and we'll sew up this pennant today," Chesbro finally spoke up.

With misgiving, but under the pressure, Griffith changed his plans, nominating Chesbro to pitch the opening game. Manager Jimmy Collins, of the Red Sox, sent the right-handed Bill Dineen to the mound.

Amid great fanfare, with Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, leading the band, the game began "Tessie," famed song of Boston rooters, was tooted incessantly by the bandsmen. For five innings, Chesbro and Dineen were locked in a scoreless duel.

Then Chesbro unaccountably lost his effectiveness. Boston staged an uproarious rally in the sixth inning and went on to win the game, 12 to 6. The Highlanders' lead was cut to a half game.

Powell was in the box for the New Yorkers in the second game, with Cy Young pitching for the Red Sox. It was an epic, Powell losing, 1-0, when Outfielder Anderson made a poor throw with a man on second base in the seventh inning.

Two Games To Go, Sox Need One to Clinch Pennant.

RETURNING TO NEW YORK for the final double-header on Monday, the Red Sox needed one victory to clinch the pennant. The Highlanders could win if they took both games. Manager Griffith had already determined on his pitching choice: Chesbro in the first game, Powell in the second.

Chesbro had won 41 games for the Highlanders that season, losing only 11. He had pitched a one-hit game, a two-hit game, a three-hit game and eight four-hit games. He had scored six shut-outs. And he had never been knocked out of the box!

Manager Jimmy Collins countered with Bill Dineen. For four innings, it was a brilliant duel with Chesbro plummeting his speedy and moist delivery into Kleinow's mitt and Dineen also pitching shut-out ball. Then, in the fifth, the Highlanders broke through. Two New York runs clattered across the plate.

Dineen was wavering. Three straight hits . . . by Kleinow, Chesbro himself and Outfielder Pat Dougherty . . . scored one run. Dineen, unsteady now, lost control completely. Eventually he walked "Wee Willie" Keller and Kid Elberfeld, on eight successive pitches, and forced in a second run.

Two runs, with Chesbro on the mound, loomed sufficient. Griffith counted the game won. But, in the seventh, La Chance and Ferris batted out hits against Chesbro and Criger advanced the runners with a sacrifice bunt. The weak-hitting Bill Dineen bounced a mild grounder at Second Baseman Williams who was confronted with an easy play on La Chance at the plate. And then—horrors!—Williams hurried his throw, tossed the ball wildly into the dirt and both runners crossed the plate, tying the score.

But those were only events leading up to the climactic tragedy. Came the ninth inning. Dineen had steadied and the score was still 2-2. Lou Criger had opened the inning with an infield single. Two outs advaced him to third base. Freddy Parent was at bat for the Red Sox.

Big Chesbro watched for Catcher Kleinow's sign, nodded his assent. One strike breezed past Parent. The next pitch he fouled. Chesbro wasted the next delivery and the count was two strikes, one ball. Chesbro wasted no pitches. The next would be the "pay-off" pitch.

It was.

The Wild Pitch That Lost a League Championship.

It was the famous wild pitch. Kleinow had signalled for a spitball. Chesbro's grip on the saliva-covered horsehide deserted him in the moment of his greatest need. It was the "spitter" that didn't break. Kleinow, crouching in anticipation of the downward drop could not get his mitt up for the ball which sailed past Parent, neck-high, and rolled to the grandstands. Criger scored from third with the run that won the pennant for the Red Sox.

Ironically, Parent struck out on the next pitch.

Thus did 34-year-old Clark Griffith's dream of a pennant for his Highlanders take a nightmarish turn in the broad daylight of that October 12 afternoon, 1904.

But that historic game might have had no baring on the pennant race were it not for an equally brutal break in the luck of the Highlanders earlier in the season against Boston. That was the now-famous Powell-McGuire incident.

Jack Powell, Griffith's pitcher, and Jim McGuire, one of his catchers, were unquestionably the two slowest base runners ever gathered on one team. It was a popular saying that neither could run to first base in a week.

Thus, with the Red Sox holding a one-run lead over the Highlanders in a game at Boston and with McGuire on first and Powell at bat, Griffith could not resort to the sacrifice bunt. The most perfect bunt in

Hines Fires 67; Leads in $5,000 Open

Long Island Shotmaker Cuts 3 Strokes Off Par in Oakland Play.

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 28.—Jimmy Hines, his clubs beating a par-shattering answer to a difficult golfing test, posted a 67 to lead the field today in the opening round of the $5,000 Oakland 72-hole open tournament.

The tall, blond shot master from Garden City, Long Island, N. Y., who has definitely arrived at the peak of his game since the winter tournament swing got under way, hit the short but trying Sequoyah course for a 32 on the outgoing nine and finished with a 35 to set the pace for nearly 200 starters. Par for the layout is 35, 35—70.

Hines combined four one-putt greens with a remarkably accurate short game to move into top position ahead of such starting favorites as Jimmy Thomson and Sam Snead, the two booming drivers of the game; Harry Cooper, Henry Picard, Johnny Revolta and Horton Smith.

Thomson had putting trouble, compiling a pair of 37's for a 74. Snead, winner of the 1937 Oakland open, showed a return to form with a 34-37—71.

Cooper, one of the most-feared competitors of the clan, ended the initial eighteen with a 34-36—70, a total count matched by Picard with a pair of 35's.

Revolta, black-haired artist from Evanston, Ill., who opened the big swing with a victory in the Miami open, turned in a 35-36 for a 71, while Horton Smith, Chicago stylist, scored a 75, with 37-38, respectively.

Two tournament "dark horses"—Leonard Ott, Denver, and Johnny Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., followed Hines' lead by one stroke. Vic Ghezzi Deal, N. J., was within easy firing with a 69, with a 36 for the outgoing nine.

Stationed at par 70 with Cooper and Picard were Ben Hogan, Fort Worth, Tex., and Al Zimmerman.

Other "big name" entrants encountered various troubles, including Lawson Little, former amateur champion with a 75, Craig Wood, of Rumson, N. J., with a 72, Ky Laffoon, Chicago, 73; Harold McSpaden, Boston, 76, and Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa., 77.

The low 160 scorers qualified for tomorrow's second round. An intermittent drizzle of rain made the course slightly slow.

Crash Kills Rosemeyer, German Ace

Vanderbilt Cup Winner Dies When Tire Rips Off Speeding Car.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Jan. 28.—Bernd Rosemeyer, famed German racing driver and 1937 winner of the Vanderbilt Cup in the United States, was killed today in an automobile race on the Frankfort-on-Main-Darmstadt road.

His widow is Elli Beinhorn, a noted flier. She was not at the scene.

A front tire on Rosemeyer's Auto-Union car wrenched off while the racer was doing 275 miles an hour.

The car skidded 80 yards, somersaulted twice and was catipulted 200 yards through the air. Rosemeyer was flung out in midair and smashed into an embankment. He died instantly.

He had been competing in speed tests for new records. The trials were abandoned and a search begun for Frau Rosemeyer, who was believed to be in the Silesian Mountains.

Rosemeyer was the father of a 10-week-old boy.

A boisterous wind bothered the racers, and apparently a sudden gust caused Rosemeyer's car to swerve. Just before the accident, his competitor, Rudolf Caracciola, had made 273 miles an hour.

The tests were made on a 15-mile stretch of concrete-surfaced highway with only a slight curve between Frankfort-on-Main and Darmstadt, one of the standard-type motor roads built on Chancellor Hitler's orders. The highway has two traffic lanes of 25 feet each, separated by an 8-foot grass stretch.

Rosemeyer, one of Germany's ace drivers, won the International Nurnberg Ring Race and the Italian Grand Prix classic in 1936.

Maryland U. Five Loses To Tarheels

Carolina Defeats Terps in Conference Clash by 43-24.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 28. North Carolia's fast stepping basketball team won its ninth gamein 12 starts and its seventh conference victory in eight games by easily defeating Maryland here tonight, 43 to 24.

The Tarheels went to work shortly after intermission with several magnificent shots by Pete Mullis, diminutive forward, and Foy Grubb, alert guard. Grubb sank three beauties from mid-court to increase the Tarheel lead 19 points with 12 minutes to go. The score at that time was 37 to 18.

Coach Walter Skidmore substituted freely in the closing seven minutes and the Terps cut down the white phantoms' margin by several points.

The passing of Capt. Ruth and Bershak, the guarding of Grubb and Dilworth, and the shooting of Mullis and Grubb were the bright spots in the Tarheels' play.

Charlie Norton, big sophomore center, was the Terps' chief offensive threat. John McCarthy shone on defense.

Maryland missed numerous shots in the early minutes of the first and second halves, but the Tarheels presented a well-nigh impregnable defense once they were able to diagnose the Old Liners' fast-breaking attack.

Five Middie Varsities See Action Today

Court, Ring, Wrestling Fencing, Gymnastic Teams at Work.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 28—Five varsity events and two for the plebes tomorrow make up the first big Saturday in sports for Navy athletes of the present winter season. Fencing and gymnastics are the sports which make their seasonal bow.

The fencing will be against St. John's of Brooklyn, and special interest is given the bout as the visiting swordsmen took a fall out of the Army last Saturday at West Point.

The Navy gymnasium men open their season against Penn State.

The other varsity events are basketball with Washington and Jefferson; wrestling with the University of North Carolina and boxing with Western Maryland, the latter being the sole attraction in the evening. In the afternoon the plebes will meet the freshmen of Western Maryland and have a basketball game with Staunton Military Academy.

Patty Berg Easy Victor In Golf Play

Beats Jean Bauer by 10 and 8 Score for Title at Punta Gorda.

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 28 (AP).—Patty Berg, in her best form, won the Championship of Champions Women's Golf Tournament with a crushing 10 and 8 finals victory over pretty Jean Bauer.

Seven under women's par on the first 18, the Minneapolis redhead clipped off another four strokes on the ten holes played this afternoon.

The 18-year-old Miss Berg said recently she was getting "more distance" on her shots and she proved it today. Not only were her woods and irons longer than Miss Bauer's, but they were more accurate as well.

The lop-sided victory was unexpected, since Miss Bauer Providence, R. I., player who is making her fifth tour of the Florida winter tournaments, ousted last year's winner, Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., in 19 holes yesterday.

Playing even par golf, Miss Bauer was no match for Chunky Patty from the start. She slipped one down on the third hole, evened things on the fourth, then lost three in a row. By time the morning round ended with Miss Berg six up, the result no longer was in doubt.

Miss Bouer made a valiant effort this afternoon.

There was no stopping Miss Berg, though. She won the first two holes on the final round to go eight up. They halved the third and fourth, then Patty took the fifth with a par four. A birdie won the seventh and eighth, halved the ninth and fired a birdie to finish out the match on the 10th.

Thus, the stalwart Minneapolis high school girl got off to a good start on her third swing around the winter fairways. She was runner up to Miss Hemphill here last year, won two other tournaments and went at least as far as the semi-finals in another pair.

Pitcher Herbie DeVers Defies Size Bugaboo

By Walter Haight.

During the past 12 years, thousands of Washington men and boys have played their sandlot baseball and football under the banner of the Capital City League but I'll wager that not one knows why the ruling sandlot organization was named "Capital City." In my capacity as sandlot editor of The Post, I formed the league and picked the name.

In addition to writing stories about the loop, I also had to write the headlines on my yarns. Few newspaper readers know that "heads," as we call them, often are formed only after a long wrestle with the King's English. There is a certain number of letters and spaces that will fit the columns and the "head" not only must be a good label for the story but it cannot be too short or too long. The "headwriter" has to juggle words until he arrives at the perfect combination.

Now the "head" generally used on my stories was our "No. 6." Knowing that I would have to write hundreds of these headlines, I decided to have a name for the league that would fit the required space. "Capital City" was the right number of units and fit perfectly. That's why for years sports page readers have seen headlines like: "Capital City Club Plays 8 Game " and "Capital City Flag Won By Aztecs."

My Capital City League days were some of my most enjoyable in the newspaper business. I listened to the alibis of the losers, congratulated the winners, tried to make schedules fit in between church excursions to Marshall Hall and settled the many protests to the best of my ability. However, it was occasions like the time that I stayed at the office until 4:30 a. m. rearranging schedules and revising the standing and then fell in my bed at 5:30 a. m., only to be awakened seemingly a few minutes later by the ring of the phone and a squeaky voice that asked, "Where do the Anacostia Insects play Saturday?" that made me determined to try to work myself into another sports department assignment.

These thoughts and many others came to mind last night as I talked to Harry Fones, well-known sandlot manager, about the pitching prowess of Herbie DeVers, who starred last season with Fones' New Deal Club.

Herbie is a Brightwood boy who has fairly grown up with the Capital City League and has had to overcome the general belief of baseball men that a pitcher has to be a big boy. When Herbie reported to try out for a midget team he was asked the position he played and the manager eyed him from shoes to hat when Herbie answered "Pitcher."

But Herbie might have been little but he also was loud as far as heaving the ball plateward was concerned and he wasn't long in making the grade for his class. For years young DeVers has been disproving the "too small" pitcher theory. He fast-balled and curved his way to stardom in the midget, junior and senior ranks of the Capital City League and last year he was one of the circuit's outstanding unlimited class hurlers.

Pitching for the New Dealers, Herbie compiled a brilliant record, winning 11 games without a loss and finishing every game he started with the exception of one. In 91 1-3 innings, he allowed 65 hits, 28 runs, walked 26, fanned 92 and hit 3 batsmen.

Only once has DeVers admitted that he was "too small." Last year, one of the New Deal rooters talked to Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox about Herbie and word came for him to report when the Boston Club came to town. Herbie told his friends and they brought up the "too small" angle so definitely that he did not go to the ball park.

Herbie, now 22 years old and weighing 148 pounds, is 5 feet, 6 inches tall. If I'm not mistaken he is as large, if not larger, than Eddie Cicotte, Dickie Kerr and Clark Griffith at the time they were doing considerable pitching in the American League.

Maybe the big league has been overlooking a bet. Who was it who said, "The best things come in small packages?"

Loss Knocks Riders From Series Lead

Eastern, Penalized Earlier, Ties for First by Staying Idle.

Interhigh Standings.

	W.	L.		W.	L.
Eastern	4	1	Tech	2	2
Roosevelt	4	1	Wilson	1	3
Western	3	1	Central	0	5

By Jack Munhall.

Wilson nosed out Central, 23-21, and Western trimmed Roosevelt, 37-19, in a double-header last night at Tech gym where 500 spectators gathered to witness the finish of one of the most unusual days in interhigh basketball history.

During the course of the 24 hours the leading and undefeated Eastern team was idle but slipped out of undisputed first place and back into a tie for the same spot. Roosevelt, also without playing, jumped from second place into the lead, then saw action and droped into a tie with Eastern, and Wilson won its first victory in series history.

This chain of events started with an announcement by Principal Charles E. Bart, of Eastern, which nullified that school's 44-19 victory over Roosevelt because Eastern used an ineligible boy.

Acting on the disclosure, Birch E. Bayh took the victory from Eastern and awarded it on forfeit to Roosevelt. That juggling changed Eastern's record to four victories and a loss, in place of five consecutive victories and also raised Roosevelt's average to four victories and no setbacks instead of three wins and a defeat.

Western Vaults Back.

All this transpired before the four teams even took the floor for last night's bargain bill, and they immediately proceeded to jumble the standings again.

Western, defending champion, vaulted back into the race in routing the Riders by notching its third victory against a single beating, while the Riders, after enjoying the exclusive atmosphere of first place, dropped back in a deadlock with Eastern.

Wilson's initial conquest produced the first overtime engagement of the series.

The contest, close throughout, took two extra periods until a pair of free shots by Jack Hoyt and Don Dunnington settled the decision for the Presidents. The game also brought forth an odd procedure when after the first extra period found the fives tied at 21-21, the referees decided the first team making 2 points would win.

Central had a chance for victory in the 5-minute extra period when Mal MacDonald fouled John Fanning. But the Mount Pleasant center missed the toss. In the second extra period, Don Dunnington had an equal opportunity when fouled by Harry Martin, of Central, but his effort also failed.

After Central had gained a 7-4 lead in the opening quarter, and a 12-6 advantage in the early minutes of the second stanza, Wilson hit its stride and pulled up to 11-13 at half time. Findely tied the count on the first play of the third quarter and thereafter the victory-starved quintets fought point for point.

Central Takes Lead.

At the end of the period, Central led 19-17, by dint of fanning two baskets, but with two minutes to play, Joe Roller, a President substitute, threw in a basket and two foul tosses to stymie the score at 21-21. After that there was little of note, until Wilson won the battle on the charity goals.

Western won its surprisingly easy victory with a great second-half spurt in which it outscored Roosevelt, 27-9, after the teams had left the floor at intermission on even terms, 10-10. In the rally, the superb shooting of Bob Custer, big Western forward, and Len Stanton, equally large center, was outstanding. But they received valuable aid from Bob Holloran and Irving Needle who showed their best form of the series.

Faltering before the Georgetowners' third period drive, Roosevelt was far arrears, 23-14, as the last quarter started and although "Ace" Stein rammed in a field goal, the Westerners were not to be halted and rushed back to swish through 12 markers while holding the Riders to only 2.

Custer was high scorer with seven baskets; Stanton accounted for 8 points; Holloran, 6, and Needle, 7. For Roosevelt, George West, with 7, and Stein, with 5, were best.

4,000 To See Cardinal Boxers Meet Terps

This Morning
WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Out of the mail bag: "Anent your column on 'Terrible Terry' this morning, here's another squib to add to your collection of Terry stories:

POVICH.

"Back in 1933, Terry with his Giants were scheduled to play an exhibition game in Flint, Mich., following a league game the previous day. After much ballyhoo and publicity in Flint about the stars who would play with the Giants, it was later reported that all of the Giants would not make the trip to Flint. So, of course, there was hardly a handful of spectators present when the Giants took the field.

"The size of the gate and the lack of interest displayed by the town irked Terry considerably. He was sitting on the bench chewing his usual quid and popping off about the town when a camera man for the Detroit Times asked Terry for permission to take a picture.

"Terry gave the photographer a short answer. In fact, he said, 'Get out of here!' The camera man asked Terry what was ailing him, and Terry replied with a wave of his hand, 'Look at those empty seats. These yokels don't know a good ball club when they see one.'

"'I don't know about that,' the photographer answered. 'The House of David played here last week and drew a crowd of 6,500 fans.' He didn't stop to hear Terry's answer to that one!"

Army and Navy Club."

* * * *

To hear Terry tell it, his pet aversion is the gambler who bets on ball games. He has his own method of distinguishing between a fan and a gambler. In his Saturday Evening Post article he writes of being approached one night in a movie theater.

"The place was dark and I was in an aisle seat absorbed in what was on the screen, probably Mickey Mouse," said Terry.

"'Listen Bill, this unseen visitor whispered, 'my little boy is crazy to see Hubbell pitch, talks about Hub in his sleep, my little boy does. I can take him tomorrow—day off—will Hubbell pitch—'

"I was out of the seat with a leap and running up the aisle after a shadowy figure. People must've thought me screwy, and I was, with rage. I barged into the lobby, blinked from the sudden glow of the lights and spotted the guy. I knew it was the aisle-crawler by the way he was panting from his retreat.

"'You damned so-and-so!' I exclaimed and he backed into a corner. "If you ever come near me again, I'll put this fist right through your face.

"He ducked past and out into the street. Incidentally, that's the only time a gambler ever bothered me in 24 years of baseball."

And now, the question arises, how did Terry know the chap was a gambler? Just psychic, I guess.

At that, Terry was probably justified in some measure in his diatribe against baseball writers. There isn't much doubt that too many of the baseball scriveners take themselves too seriously, and, from the vantage point of the press box, second-guess the managers. There is a tendency, too, among the scriveners to make no allowances for a manager's temperament.

Washington witnessed a case of rank injustice on the part of a baseball writer a couple of years ago. Joe Cronin, who was managing the Red Sox, had just entered the dressing room after a tough game. His Boston club had lost after a succession of tough breaks and Cronin was in no kindly mood.

An unthinking reporter who made no allowances for the fact that Cronin didn't like to lose, entered the dressing room expecting to find the Red Sox manager the personification of sweetness and light. He began to pester Cronin with questions.

"Get out of here!" yelled Joe. "I don't want to talk now."

Whereat the reporter took umbrage, sat down at his typewriter, hacked out a piece that screamed "Fathead!" and advised Cronin he was in dutch with the press.

At Cleveland, Walter Johnson probably encountered the most critical press in the world. Manager Johnson was blamed for his players' inability to bunt, he was charged with overworking his pitchers and underworking 'em. If the Indians won, they won despite Johnson and if they lost, they lost because of him.

But the final blow came one day when Johnson's greatest critic who, incidentally, had been managing Cleveland teams from the press box for years, asked Johnson over the phone who his pitcher would be for the next day.

"I don't know yet," answered Johnson honestly. "I haven't made up my mind."

"Well," said the sports editor, "suppose then you come down to my office and we'll go over the situation together."

Said Johnson, justifiably: "Go to hell."

Don't fail to read Shirley Povich's column in Sunday's Post.

Maryland's Mitt Squad Is Underdog

Eight Bouts Scheduled for Program; Johnson, Greco Fight Tops.

By Bob Garrison.

With local curiosity aroused to a pitch that would lend credit ot a Cheshire, Maryland and Catholic University boxing teams await the gong tonight that will send them into an eight-bout-meet, the result of which may hinge on any one match.

More than 4,000 persons are expected to pack the Catholic University Brookland gym for an opportunity to see just how successful an underdog Maryland team will be matching its "baby" boxers against the experienced Cardinal squad. First bout is set for 8:30.

Maryland drew with Duke, 4-4, in its first match of the year, while the Catholic University boxers defeated Western Maryland last week, 5-3, in their only action this year.

A week of incessant drilling for both has resulted in the home team's being made a slight favorite over the visiting Terrapins as prefight dope points to four potential victories for Eddie La Fond's crew.

Maryland, with only one letterman on the team, will rely on the services of green, though hard punching, sophomores to triumph over the Brookland team for the second time in their fourth annual clash. Maryland won the first match, dropped the second, and last year's memorable affair resulted in a 4-4 draw.

Although it would definitely be an upset if the same thing happened this year, Coach Heinie Miller is warning of that—at least that—for his team, Catholic University is generally being conceded only four bouts by majority followers of both squads, and Maryland has at least a 50-50 chance of winning the remaining quartet of events, thus duplicating last year's draw.

This, however, is believed to depend on the outcome of the 155-pound bout which will pit Maryland's Dick Johnson against Sully Greco, the clever Cardinal middleweight.

Johnson May Click.

Should Johnson, with a single college bout that resulted i a technical knockout loss to his credit, somehow manage to continue the sensational punching that he has shown in practice this week and defeat Greco, a veteran of 21 college matches, then, and probably then only can the Terps stave off impending defeat.

As a result of mid-term examination marks announced yesterday at College Park, Don Adams, sophomore heavyweight, has been declared ineligible for competition, and as result Miller will use Joe Henderson, 20-year-old senior, against Leo Katalinas, 234-pound heavyweight.

As other events stack up, David Bernstein, clever boxing 115-pounder, appears the winner in the first bout of the evening against Maryland's George "Red" Dorr.

Other Cardinals held to be favorities in their bouts include Leo Katalinas, who will meet Henderson; Fred Stant, 165-pound Red Bird representative, who will oppose John "Moe" Egan, a squad veteran of three years; and Capt. Fred Mix, if he fights Nathan Askin, Baltimore boy, who may either start at Mix's 145-pound level or at the 135-pound mark, depending on his weight this afternoon.

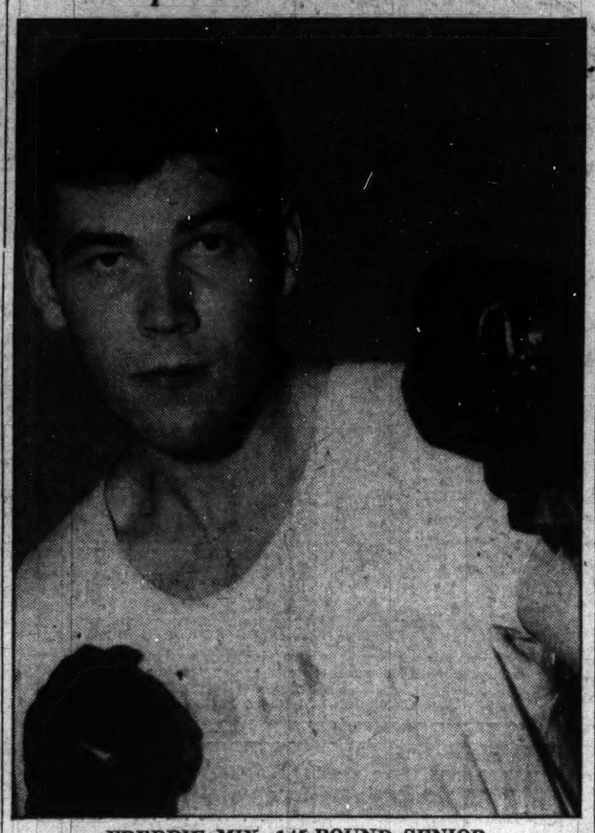

Alperstein Favored.

Pending the outcome of the weighing-in ceremonies, Benny Alperstein, National Intercollegiate 135-pound champion, will appear in the 135-pound bout. Should he outweigh Askin, however, Miller has stated that he would face Mix and Askin would then oppose Rene Benitez, Cardinal lightweight.

Alperstein is regarded as a sure winner and Askin at least an even choice to defeat Benitez if he faces him. Mix, however, is held too experienced for the Baltimore tennis player.

Maryland is being conceded the 125-pound class by most everyone except La Fond who has found a substitute for "Tex" Guinan in the person of Tony Messuri, a sophomore. He will face Bob Bradley, a promising Maryland featherweight, who has won from Richmond and Duke in his only two appearances in the ring.

Hoya Cagers Off for Game

Will Meet Syracuse Five in Contest Tonight.

Georgetown University's basketball team, resting in second place in the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference, travels to Syracuse, N. Y., to meet the Orange five tonight, in the first of three-game tour of the Empire State.

The Hoyas, holding five victories and two losses their season record, will play Syracuse, then Fordham's Rams, Tuesday night. The third game is scheduled with the Army cagers, Wednesday, at West Point.

The five-day trip precedes a 7-game conference schedule which will see Fred Mesmer's team fight it out for first place in the classy circuit. Seven games in succession with conference foes face the Hoyas before they travel North again to meet Yale and St. Bonaventure late in February.

Glen Allen Five Wins Over Fredericksburg

Rolling up a 17—8 lead in the first half, Glen Allen High School chalked up a 29-21 victory over Fredericksburg High School's quintet tonight. The local team rallied in the second half but was unable to catch the visitors, who displayed a potent scoring attack as well as a fine defense. The rival centers, Johnny Clark, of Glen Allen, and Miller Lewis, of Fredericksburg, took scoring honors.

'Y' and Jacket Mermen Meet

College Swimmers Vie With Locals Today.

Marking the lone appearance of a college swimming team in the District this season, the Randolph Macon College swimmers will face the Y. M. C. A. varsity mermen this afternoon at 5:30 in the Central "Y" pool.

The Virginia college tankmen have invaded the District many times in former years for dual meets with George Washington University. The G street school dropped swimming from its list of major sports this year, however, and the open date on the Randolph Macon schedule is being filled by the Y. M. C. A.

Swimming under intercollegiate rules for the first time this season, the "Y" swimmers have been drilling steadily the past two weeks to accustom themselves to the longer distances required by these rules.

Some of the District's outstanding swimmers will represent the Y. M. C. A. in Ernie Boggs, Earl Schmidt, John McKnight, Bob Carney, William Reynolds, John Marshall, Art Meushaw, Hubert Will, Bruce Dodd and Francis Breciel.

Bolling Field Downs Ft. Washington, 48-37

Bolling Field's tossers strengthened their claim to the Third Corps Area championship last night by trouncing Fort Washington, 48-37, in an exciting game at Bolling. Govedich and Zwisle were outstanding in the Aviators' triumph, chalking up 13 points each. Bolling's lengthy lead was the deciding factor, for Fort Washington never was able to overtake its rival.

Temperamental Pitching Star Agrees to Salary Reported to Be $15,000; Says He Wants to 'Pitch for Brooklyn and MacPhail.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 28.—Van Lingle Mungo, truant fireball pitcher for the Brooklyn Dodgers, signed a one-year contract today, allaying latest reports that he was to be sold or traded to another club.

Larry MacPhail, executive vice president of the Dodgers, declined to reveal terms of the contract but baseball men believed it called for not less than $15,000. That was supposed to be the figure on his 1937 contract but a $1,000 fine and a suspension without pay cut sharply into Mungo's earnings.

MacPhail said Mungo had signed his contract at Columbia, S. C. The pitcher made the trip by airplane from Florida and was met there by MacPhail.

Asked whether the Dodgers now planned to drop all plans of negotiating a trade with Mungo involved, MacPhail said:

"Unless we get an offer that we cannot turn down, Mungo will pitch for the Dodgers."

Mungo, 26-year-old right-hander from Pageland, S. C., has been one of the National League's greatest pitchers for years but he likewise has been ope of the league's most temperamental performers.

He quit the club without permission in Pittsburgh in 1936 and drew a fine and suspension. In May of last year he was fined $1,000 and suspended for three days after a fist fight with a team-mate, Jim Bucher. Then he developed a sore shoulder, underwent a tonsillectomy and finally was suspended indefinitely without pay for "insubordination" by Manager Burleigh Grimes. Grimes charged Mungo had made little or no effort to get into shape after his operation.

MacPhail said he had had a long talk with the pitcher and that all difficulties appeared to have been removed.

"Mungo said he wanted to pitch for me and for Brooklyn," MacPhail said. "I'm going to string along with him."

Pastor Here For Battle

Bob Arrives for Workout Before Public Today.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Bob Pastor, fugitive from Nathan Mann and one or two other bogeymen of boxing, will arrive here today to apply the finishing touches to preparations for his bout with Buck Everett Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Accompanied by his stablemate, Tommy Tucker, who has been assigned a preliminary spot on the same card, Pastor will indulge in a public workout at 3 o'clock, and you are cordially invited to give a look. He'll punch the bag, and maybe Tucker for a round or two, skip rope and shadow-box a bit.

Fresh from a two-round knockout victory over Buck Tracy, and 10-round decision over Hans Haverlock, Pastor has been installed an 8-5 batting choice over his prospective opponent, with little Everett money in sight. The New York cyclist reputedly carries too many guns for Buck, and a better all-around craftsman. Whether the one-sided figures are justified remains to be seen, and certainly Everett will have a voice in the matter.

Washington is a one-night stand in Pastor's barn-storming tour, and his manager, Jimmy Johnston, jr., has little fear of either losing or being seriously damaged Monday night. This confidence is reflected in the signing of Al Ettore for a 10-round engagement next week in Philadelphia.

Already at fine edge for the scrap, Everett confined his efforts yesterday to light work and will do nothing more today or tomorrow. Manager Jimmy Erwin is guarding against staleness and says his man is in the proper mood to hand Pastor a shellacking

Meanwhile, the matchmaker added a six-round preliminary bout to the card, signing Steve Mamakos and Joey Spangler. It will be Mamako's first start since dropping a 10-round decision to George Abrams about a month ago.

Bowling

Charlie Freeman, of the Montgomery team, set two new season records to carry off individual honors in the Arcadia Bowling League, last night at the Arcadia Alleys.

He posted a 159 individual game and a 371 individual set to better the old marks. His team also took high team honors with 540 and team set with 1,461.

In the Interstate Commerce Commission League, Lou Reznek, Traffic team member, rolled a 403 individual set to post a new mark and was individual high game roller with 150. Mimeograph took high game honors with 549 and high team set with 1,398.

In the Independent League, Louis Sels, Labor Statistics, rolled 142 for high game and 346 for high set honors. Paul's Auto Shop was high for team game with 537 and Coast-In posted the high team set, 1,497.

Victory Post Seeking Softball Title Tonight

The second round of the "battle of the century" is dut to be fought today in Tech High gym, when Victory Post and Treasury meet again in the series for the Community Center Indoor Softball League crown. The game will be played at 5 o'clock.

Victory Post, first-half winner, has the upper hand in this three-game series in that it drew first blood last Saturday when it turned what seemed to be certain defeat into an overwhelming victory in the last inning. Morgenthau's men were leading at this point by three runs but the Servicemen socked out ten runs to grab the decision, 12-5.

College Boxing Bill Introduced in House

Amateur boxing exhibitions staged by colleges, schools or universities would be exempt from provisions of the boxing act and regulation of the District Boxing Commission under a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Randolph (Democrat), West Virginia.

The exemption also would apply to boys staged by an association associated with one or more of the educational institutions.

Closure to Substitute Against Takoma Five

The game is scheduled for 9 o'clock and will be preceded by a girls' contest between Takoma and Veterans Administration.

GUS WELCH, American University's Indian athletic director, has conceived another original idea . . . While the Eagle and V. P. I. basketball players are resting between halves of their game tonight, GUS will parade a squad of fencers onto the gymnasium floor and have them perform for the fans . . . He plans to display his new boxing team for the first time when Catholic University and the Eagles get together in their return cage game, February 15 . . . WHITEY FRANCE, all-high catcher at Tech High for the past two seasons, will leave soon to accept a tryout with the Chattanooga Lookouts at Sanford, Fla. . . . He'll be a battery mate of DICK LANAHAN, now the sole property of the Engel club, if he makes the grade . . . BUCK EVERETT, North Carolina heavyweight, is part Cherokee Indian.

SIX inches of snow and zero temperature have made conditions ideal for the second running of the B. & O. Snow Train which will leave for Bear Valley at 7:30 a. m. tomorrow . . . Representative JENNINGS RANDOLPH, the former Davis-Elkins athletic head, presented his boxing bill to free local collegiate boxing from the commission's jurisdiction to the House, yesterday, and says he will seek early hearings . . . Absence of any one of the six following Maryland University athletes from tonight's boxing matches at Catholic University's gym, will be due to the fact they will be in Baltimore as escorts of ELEANOR POWELL, Moviedom's leading girl hoofer . . . Prout Memorial Track Events In Boston Today Lure Stars

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 28.—After warming up at odd distances, the Nation's outstanding track and field performers will get down to serious competition tomorrow night when they return to their various specialties in the Prout Meet at the Boston Garden.

Don Lash's indecision about whether he will start in the mile or two miles, or both, adds much uncertainty to those two featured events.

Meet officials hope the two-mile indoor record holder, an honor he gained in his last Boston start, will agree to match strides with such super-stars as Glenn Cunningham, Archie San Romani, Gene Venzke, Norman Bright and Ray Mahannah, the Junior National 1,500-meters titlist, in the prized Knights of Columbus mile. The Badgers believe that Lash's presence is needed to spur Cunningham or San Romani into a 4:10 or better performance.

If Lash limits his competition to his favorite longer distance, the Leo Larrivee Two-Mile Race should be the meet's outstanding event. In that field he will be forced to match strides with Ray Sears, the defending champion, Tom Deckard, the veteran Joe McCluskey, Floyd Lockner, who feels confident of threatening Lash's 8:58 record, and several other durable rivals.

Every one of last year's Prout victors was signed up for tomorrow's games, and officials were forced to reject 250 capable competitors as they filled each field to capacity.

The dash event will be contested by such speedsters as Marty Glickman, Ben Johnson, Eulace Peacock, Bob Rodenkirchen and Eddie O'Sullivan. Dartmouth's Johnny Donovan will be called upon to turn back such brilliant timbertoppers as Forest (Spec) Towns and Sam Allen. Jim Herbert and Dick Gill guarantee a thrilling "600." Lou Burns will be called upon to outfoot such stars as Bill Ray, Don Fleet and Alex Northrup to retain his Chevrus "1000" laurels.

Our Willie Wins at Hialeah Park After Failing in 8 Previous Starts

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post

New York, Jan. 28. — A golfing explorer returns:

Not far from me in this particular night spot was a face that I knew. I ankled over to his table and said, "Hello Gene—long time no see." He replied, "That's right. I've been gone about six months—I've been around the world."

Gene Sarazen, U. S. Open golfing champion of '22 and '32 and British Open champ in '32, had returned from a trip around the world. I asked, "What have you been doing in your travels?" He said, "I've been exploring—golf exploring."

* * * *

What did he find in his explorations? He found a new paradise for professional golfers in the Orient. "Listen," said Gene, "I just got off the liner Rex. And I'll give you my first impressions of that globe-circling trip. The thing that hits me hardest is this—there's a brand-new circuit for golf professionals in the Pacific. Golf is sweeping the Pacific. There's a new circuit out there. The golf professionals can sail from San Francisco; go to Honolulu; then to Japan; on to Hongkong, China; next to the Philippines, Singapore, Australia, New Zealand and then home."

* * * *

Sarazen, the middle-sized Italian farmer from Brookfield Center, Conn., looked just about the same as usual in his brownish-gray tweed suit. Except that he seemed a trifle heavier and possessed of more noticeable jowls. Gene is around 36 now and he explained, "I put on quite a bit of weight during my trip. Those long boat rides do it—Nothing to do but eat. Guess I weigh about 170 pounds. Next week I'm going out to Battle Creek, Mich., and pare down to around 160—so that I can play in the tourneys again."

* * * *

But what about that Pacific circuit? The dark-haired, roundfacer explorer was eager again. "They're nuts about golf in the Orient," he emphasized, "particularly in Japan. They want me to organize an Olympic team of American golfers to compete in the Japanese games in 1940. Japan figures golf should be an Olympic sport. They've got more than 50 big-time courses over in Japan. And most of them are among the most beautiful courses I ever saw. If they put golf on the Olympic schedule, maybe I'll help organize a team. They're playing golf every place I went in the Orient, except on the Island of Bali. That's the only place I didn't give an exhibition of some sort. They have no course on Bali."

* * * *

But the rest of the Orient is amazingly interested in the game. And that interest offers new possibilities for American professionals to make annual tours, it provides a new winter circuit.

Had Gene heard of the terrible things that American professionals on the Florida-California golf trail had been doing to Old Man Par? Yes, already he had been informed. And he said it was just as he prophesied before.

"The 14-club rule has made for better golf," he pointed out. "When contestants packed 25 or 30 clubs, they spent so much time figuring out which club to use that they couldn't concentrate on the game. With only 14 clubs, they became familiar with those clubs—just like good friends—and they learned how to use them accurately for various shots. It really helped everyone's game."

* * * *

But did Gene figure that the 14-club rule alone was responsible for the recent murderous assaults on par? No, he didn't. He figured that the chickens were just coming home to roost on slipshod golf course architecture.

"We are about 10 or 15 years behind in course architecture in this country," he said. "The worst fault is on the par-five holes on most courses, where the greens are much too large. This puts a premium on slugging—regardless of slicing or hooking—so that the long driver makes the green on his second stroke. That's how the long drivers make their birdies. There are about four of those par-five holes on every 18-hole course.

"No, the way those par-five holes are made now do not benefit the duffer. They work against him. The duffer usually isn't the long driver, but he's usually a guy who tries to keep to the center of the fairway. Decrease the size of those par-five greens, so that the sluggers will have to keep on the fairway to make them—even with their third shot. And we won't have par murdered any more."

* * * *

Gene and his attractive wife, went around the world with Albert E. Lasker, an advertising magnate. It was a pleasure trip for the Sarazens, "but, of course, I played golf every time I got a chance—or any place they wanted me to give an exhibition."

* * * *

After Gene knocks off his poundage at Battle Creek, he plans to compete in turneys at Pinehurst, the Augusta masters, and the international four-ball at Miami.

Incidentally, he met "Sir" Walter Hagen at Colombo, on the Island of Ceylon. Hagen had just come up from South Africa with Joe Kirkwood, and they were bound for Borneo.

* * * *

"Hagen claimed he had shot all the big game in Africa," Gene concluded. "And he and Kirkwood wanted to take a look at some of the head hunters in Borneo. Travel certainly broadens one—I tell you!"

Yacht Races Postponed.

Havana, Jan. 28 (AP).—High seas today caused postponement of the opening event in the international star class yacht races for the Bacardi trophy. Five American boats are entered in the regatta.

$7.80 Shot Handled by Joe Renick

Gelding Beats Francesco by 2 Lengths With Dnieper Third.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 28. Jesse Spencer's Our Willie, after failing to make good in eight previous starts this winter, broke the ice here today when he easily captured top honors in the Granada, a mile and a furlong event for members of the handicap division. The 5-year-old gelding scored by two lengths in 1:50 4-5 under a mere 105 pounds. He returned $7.80.

J. H. Whitney's Widener Challenge Cup hopeful, Francesco, favorite in the six-horse field, could only finish second, although Charlie Kurtsinger used his whip on the gelding almost throughout the journey. Mose Goldblatt's Dnieper, slow to break under Porter Roberts, was beaten six lengths for the place.

Our Willie finished close up in a string of races prior to his last start when, with Nick Hall up, he failed to show his customary steady effort. Today, with Joe Renick for his reinsman, the son of Waygood was back in top form. He forced Masker's pace to the top of the stretch, then put that fellow away and drew off to a very handy score. Francesco, never too far back, had scant opposition for the place with only the slow-starting Dnieper to offer anything resembling competition.

The coldest day since the recent advent of unseasonable weather failed to do much harm to the attendance, many who had to pass up the beach visiting the track. Summery clothes were scare, winter overcoats replacing the usual tropical garments.

Charlotte Girl, a $3.40 for $2 favorite in the field of seven juvenile fillies, won the first race but the many backers of the Cohort Miss had to wait more than 10 minutes after the finish before the stewards flashed the official sign. Breaking from the outside, Charlotte Girl almost immediately crossed in front of the entire field and swerved over to the inside. She opened up a wide lead and had no trouble beating Kenty Miss by a length. It was two triumphs in as many starts for the Elwood Sachsenmaier colorbearer. With the wind at her back, the filly completed the three furlongs in :33 4-5. Inscoelda, bothered by Lady Ethelyn at the break, was a game third, another length behind.

Stealing away to a wide early lead and with the wind behind him in he stretch, the $13.50 for $2 shot Noble Boy, from Detroit's Bomar Stable, easily led home the sprinters in the second event. With Johnny Longden replacing the ailing Jockey Turner in the saddle, Noble Boy never faltered and finished the six furlongs in 1:12⅘. Witan failed to reward those who made him a favorite but easily garnered the secondary honors, five lengths before Rough Party.

Jones Wins $500 Trainers' Prize

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 28 (AP).—B. A. (Ben) Jones, who conditions the Woolford Farm horses of Herbert M. Woolf, of Kansas City, Mo., wound up the first 15 days of the current meeting leading all other trainers, thereby earning the $500 prize offered by J. E. Widener, president of the Miami Jockey Club.

Points are computed on a basis of four for a winner, two for a second and one for a third. At the end of the first and second 15-day periods, $500 goes to the winner, while for the final 16 days the winner gets $350, the second trainer $100 and the third $50.

Jones, who hails from Parnell, Mo., had five firsts, eight second and nine thirds for total points of 45, easily defeating his nearest rival, Hirsch Jacobs, who had a score of 35 points with six firsts, five seconds and one third. Willie Booth was third with 31 points. The others could not menace the leaders.

NOBLE BOY, displaying high speed, moved to the front swiftly while obtaining clear passage on the inside in the opening furlong, was snugged in front while saving ground and won under light urging. WITAN broke in tight quarters, bettered his position on the outside after leaving the backstretch, saved ground in the last quarter mile, but could not engage the winner. ROUGH PARTY, a forward contender throughout, maintained his position determinedly through the stretch.

Daily Double, Charlotte Girl and Noble Boy, Paid $29.90.

AT PLAY, away well, went forwardly on the outside under light restraint to the stretch turn, disposed of ARMOR BEARER after a wild drive and held sway in the final furlong under slight urging. ARMOR BEARER took command with a rush, set a steady pace and shook off JAMES A. midway around the turn, continued gamely when challenged, but was not equal to the winner. JAMES A. went in close attendance of the pace from the start and had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:40. Off 3:41½. Winner, J. W. THE WHALE, away slowly, began to better his position while securing clear passage along the inner rail in the final three furlongs and outlasted ROAR in the final drive. ROAR broke forwardly, forced a steady pace and raced NAD into defeat in the opening half mile, drew clear on the stretch turn, but faltered when challenged. GANGPLANK, off tardily and slow to find his stride, slipped through on the inside entering the stretch and closed gamely.

BUCK LANGHORNE, going in his best form, gained rapidly between the leaders rounding the turn, drew out when straightened into the stretch and won with something to spare. SHINING SUN, off well, went forwardly for the entire trip and closed courageously in the final drive. JAIR, lightly restrained in the early running, moved up boldly on the stretch turn, but faltered in the stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Granada. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:32. Off 4:34. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OUR WILLIE, $7.80, $3.50, $2.60; FRANCESCO, $3.30, $2.40; DNIEPER, $2.80.

OUR WILLIE, running in his best form, followed the pace closely from the start, moved up with determination when placed under pressure, opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch, but was ridden out briskly to maintain his lead. FRANCESCO, well up the entire trip, responded gamely to punishment, easily disposed of the others, but could not reach the winner. DNIEPER threw his head into the air at the start and was off poorly, gained steadily and wore MASKER down through the stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming; allowances. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:04. Winner, C. S. HEADIN' HOME followed the pace under slight restraint in the opening half mile, disposed of ESCOHIGH at his leisure and appeared an easy winner, but Longden took matters easy and he almost tossed the race off. SACHEM, outrun in the early stages, responded gamely to pressure in the final quarter mile, gained rapidly and would have won in another stride. ESCOHIGH, rushed to the front, set a fast pace while saving ground, but faltered in the final furlong.

STARWICK, a forward contender all the way, also saved much ground and held TUT TUT safe in the last furlong.

Clark Griffith

the world would not give the lumbering McGuire a chance to go to second base.

Whereupon, Griffith attempted strategy of another sort. Giving Powell a secret sign to slug the first pitch, Griffith ambled up to the batter's box and loudly ordered Powell to bunt the first offering. Powell protested loudly.

"You bunt that first pitch or I'll fine you $50!" yelled Griffith. The ruse gained the desired effect. Catcher Lou Criger, overhearing the conversation, ordered a high, fast pitch, the perfect bunting ball. The Red Sox were eager to let Powell attempt to bunt with the slow-moving McGuire on base.

The pitch came—the only kind of a pitch that Powell, incidentally, could hit—and the big pitcher swung mightily against it. A viciously-socked line-drive rattled against the leftfield fence and McGuire was headed home with the tying run.

He passed second, rounded third, frantically slid for home, head first. But he had misguaged his distance. It was a perfect slide . . . as far as it went. But McGuire was still 2 feet from the plate when he ended his slide—and too tuckered to crawl the remaining distance. Eventually, Catcher Criger got possession of the ball, tagged McGuire out and, just to do a complete job of the play, threw out Powell, who was vainly striving to get to third base during the excitement.

Dear Al: — Selections at Hialeah Park.

There has been a steady flow of horses from this point to Havana. Ferry Boat, Never Cease, Zump and Gentleman Jack, owned by Mrs. A. Phillips, are the latest to transfer to the Cuban track. However, there remain more than 1,700 thoroughbreds in Florida and upward of 1,000 more would be here if stables were available. "It's a natural!" exclaimed Irving Sherry as he proudly announced to the boys in the pressbox that he was the papa of a 7-pound 11-ounce son. The maestro of the telegraph key for the Nationwide News Service reports that Mama Sherry is doing well in New York, where the baby was born on Monday. Fred Darling, who saddled four English Derby winners, is among the visitors here and the beauty of Hialeah has his eyes popping. Time Clock will be on the shelf for some time as the result of grabbing his foreleg in yesterday's race. The 7-year-old suffered a jagged cut. With Sarno suspended for 10 days, the race for the apprentice jockey prize at the meeting appears to be between Mora and Scheih. Eddie Arcaro tops the veterans with 13 winners to Charlie Kurtsinger's 9 going into today's program. Brush Hook, Court Scandal, Preeminent and War Minstrel turned in good workouts this morning. Clocker Mike is getting to be a real "go for." With the slot machines ruled out here, Mike "goes for" the horses in the afternoon and the dogs at night.

BILL.

First race—R. Pinchot appears ideally placed in the day's opener and packs the speed that I believe will bring him a set of brackets. Yenoc and Back Fence are good now and may be the ones to chase him to the imaginary wire.

Second race—Black Mistress seems to have a slight edge here. She is at her best now and may take the measure of Knowing. Great Haste works well and may be a keen factor.

Third race—Martin Barton and Melody Maid figure to battle it out for the chief money in this field. The first named is my pick. Black Peter runs good in the morning and probably will be in the thick of contention here.

Fourth race—Higher Cloud is out of a stable of fit horses and appears capable of gathering a purse in this company. Fair Lead and Kingsbury have run good races hereabouts and are dangerous.

Fifth race—Mythical King turned in a nice last effort and deserves the call in this open race. Cravat and Cliff are not too highly placed in this company and deserve some attention.

Sixth race—Clocks galloped away with that feature last out and meets about the same kind here. If he breaks alertly, it will be two in a row. War Minstrel and Brush Hook seem to have something on the others.

Seventh race—Later On, Mothel and Kievs Pennant are a close fit in this field. I prefer them in the order named.

Eighth race—Danarco, a good sprinter, goes the route on occasions and I'm going to try to make him stick to his running guns long enough to down Sunanair and Conrad Mann.

Best bet—Higher Cloud.

Eagles Meet V.P.I. Tonight

The American University Eagles, presently enjoying a fairly successful basketball season, step into fast company tonight when they play host to the strong V. P. I. five in the American U. gym at 8:15.

Victorious in two out of three games played this season, Coach Staff Cassell's cagers will be playing their first home game. The Eagles have defeated Western Maryland and Catholic University, while losing to Johns Hopkins.

Virginia Poly holds an impressive victory over Richmond University's team, scored when it was in the midst of a winning streak which included a victory over Maryland. It lost to Washington and Lee.

The Eagles will start Emerson Bartlett and Samuel Hickey at forward; Dudley Rogers, center, and George Brown and Hugo Schultz at guard.

Business Must Heed Public, Harriman Says

Union Pacific Chairman Holds Popular Objectives Should Be Accepted.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 28.—W. Averell Harriman, chairman of Secretary Roper's business advisory council, said today business "should accept the objectives of the people of the country"

Addressing the Bond Club, the chairman of the Union Pacific Railroad said "buinessmen are for most of the objectives, perhaps all, that the politician, the straight-thinking politician, puts on the table. If we go out and attack those objectives, we go four-square against the opinion of the country. I believe in democracy, and I believe we should accept the objectives of the people of the country."

"After all," Harriman continued, "when a politician makes a speech, he is staking his political capital, just as we are staking our financal capital when we make an investment in an enterprise. It doesn't do us a bit of good to get mad, but it does do us a lot of good to sit back and analyze the political reason for it."

In analyzing a political measure, Harriman said business has lost sight of the objective of the measure. "We go out to defeat it," he said. "Because of that, business people have appeared to be opposed to what the people of the country have agreed are their objectives."

The railroad executive said there was "a good feeling" on the part of the general public toward railroads today, adding: "That was not an accident. It was the result of an analysis of the steps to be taken to get their story across."

President Roosevelt, he said, "is perhaps the best friend the railroads have."

Copper Price Cut To 10 Cents, ¼ Lower

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The price of domestic copper was cut to 10 cents a pound today in a slash made simultaneously by custom smelters and primary producers. It brought the market back to the low of last December when custom smelters, for a single day, offered the red metal at that figure.

In making the market uniform at 10 cents the custom smelters dropped the price ¼ cent while the producers chipped off ½ cent. Last week the producers cut their long held 11 cent price, which the trade regarded as purely nominal, by ½ cent. At the same time custom smelters lowered their price from 10½ to 10¼ cents.

Cotton Lower; March at 8.34

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—Cotton was lower today under liquidation. May eased from 8.45 to 8.38 and closed at 8.41, with final prices 3 to 6 points net lower.

Opening quotations also showed losses of 3 to 6 points, but after the initial selling had let up prices recovered to around the previous closing levels. There was no follow-up to the buying, and selling increased moderately. Prices displayed a heavy tone during most of the afternoon, with buying restricted principally to trade price fixing. Toward the close a little scattered covering caused partial recoveries.

Wheat Prices Follow Stocks To Lower Level

Forecast of Rain in Dry Area Helps Decline of Cent a Bushel.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—Jarred by stock market downturns and by forecasts of moisture in domestic dry areas, Chicago wheat values today fell a cent a bushel maximum.

Late reports of dust storms in Kansas and Oklahoma acted, however, as something of an offset for wheat price losses here. The setbacks of Chicago wheat quotations were in the face of reported purchases of Argentine wheat for Germany and nothwithstanding predictions in Canada that the United States may export more than 100,000,000 bushels this year, although the total so far has been only about 36,000,000 bushels. Approximately 300,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was bought today for export.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ of a cent lower to ⅛ higher compared with yesterday's finish, May, 93½ to 93⅝; July, 88¾ to 88⅞; corn, ⅛ off to ⅛ up; May, 60⅛; July, 60⅝ to 60¾; oats unchanged to ¼ lower, rye unchanged to ⅝ advance, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 7 cents.

Prices Decline as Liquidation Continues; Gold Shares in Demand; Franc Recovers.

New York, Jan. 28.—Stocks lost further ground, but the decline was irregular. Selling was concentrated in two periods, shortly before and shortly after the noon hour. Sales volume dried up when prices steadied, but the turnover was heavy when prices were falling. Total sales were around 1,250,000 shares. The industrial stock price index pierced the low (made on January 3) of the year for the first time. The railroad shares sold at a fresh low level. French francs were moved up a few points by official support. Government bonds were firm. Most commodities were steady, but May wheat closed ⅝ of a cent lower at 93½ cents a bushel.

Stocks slogged around in the first hour with irregular price changes and started downward before the details were learned of the President's message on military spending. The message proved to be little different than advance notice, contemplating an outlay of a billion, mostly to go to increase the Navy by 20 per cent. However, the outlay, to be made over the next few months and the coming year was considered much below what stock speculators had anticipated, and even those stocks which might profit most from re-armament were heavy after receipt of the message. Steel sold at a new low on this movement, under 52, and other shares, aside from the gold stocks, were down in proportion.

Pessimism Grows.

After all, it is not the outlay on armament that is keeping alive the dim spark of hope in the speculative markets, it is rather the expectation of real inflation pumped in for the sake of staving off a collapse in prices which many feel will take place unless something be done. That something, one section of opinion holds, is far more likely to be inflationary measures, synonymous with New Deal finance in any event, than a sound program to aid business which would include the scrapping of restrictions on the new capital market, the undistributed profits tax, the attack on the utilities and the general disposition to abuse the businessman.

At heart few people in Wall street expect the President to do more of a constructive nature than he may be forced to do by Congress, and that admittedly is not counting upon a great deal. Whether business can stand the strain until help comes from some direction is the question. Certainly there has seldom been a time when pessimism was so widespread in Wall street, the oversupply of which being one reason why speculators are willing to take a small chance on a rally.

Depressing Influence.

Industry and finance in this country are following the pattern in which the clutch was out in the early years of the present Administration. No one wishes to see wages cut, nor do the manufacturers and producers wish to cut prices, but the hard facts of lowered purchasing power and unsold goods are difficult to blink, as also is the fact that profit is the slim difference between costs of production and prices paid by consumers. Those who still have incomes capable of being taxed will be heavy contributors, as they have been in the past, to the relief rolls and the Government's social reform schemes.

It is too much to expect them to double their contributions through the indirect method of operating business at a loss for the express purpose of providing goods for consumers at less than cost in order to maintain wages and give industry a false appearance of activity. That means of economic suicide would be regarded as ridiculously out of the question were it not proposed by the President himself, which only adds to the depressing influences at work on men's minds.

Credit Outweighs Demand.

Doubtless a more realistic view will prevail, and business once more will go forward by the time tried procedure of bringing costs down to the market and of lifting consumption by raising production. The latest plan of the President, to provide loans from the Treasury for "small" business, also is familiar to those who recall the efforts of 1933-35. Plenty of credit is available to all borrowers with any chance of using it at a profit. The trouble is that those who ordinarily would borrow are worried about how to employ the funds they already possess. As for big business, it faces the same obstacles of uncertainty over wages and taxes, and has the additional problem of reaching investors' savings through a capital market cluttered with restrictions and suffering from the general lack of confidence.

Deflation in commercial borrowing at the banks continues. In New York City the decline this week was $20,000,000, along with a small drop in brokers' loans. Another sign of the slack demand for credit is the rapid rise in excess reserves, which for the whole country this week jumped $70,000,000 to a total of $1,440,000,000. Meanwhile the reduced pay rolls and cuts in the daily spending of the people are reflected in declining currency needs. The reduction in circulation this week was $52,000,000.

Dividends.

The dividend slaughter continues. Up to today 783 sizable companies have met since the first of the year for dividend action on their common stocks. Payments were suspended on 31 issues, or 4 per cent of the total, and reductions were ordered in 20, or 2½ per cent of the total. Among the important companies omitting dividends were American Water Works, United States Steel, Allied Stores, Brooklyn Union Gas, Interchemical, Keystone Steel, Colgate, Hollander, Wilson and Allegheny Steel. Reductions were voted by American Machine & Foundry, Champion Paper, Lehigh Portland Cement, Melville Shoe and United States Pipe & Foundry. A considerable number of preferred dividends also have been passed.

Baldwin.

On the face of things it appears that Baldwin Locomotive preferred shareholders will get cash in full on dividends, while bondholders will be only partially paid, but actually the cash will go to the bondholders. The refunding 6 per cents voted preferred stock in payment for the interest coupons and the regular semi-annual dividend in cash was ordered for the preferred stock, which sells around $14 a share but is given to bondholders at par of $30 a share. The recapitalization contemplated that sort of an arrangement and the bondholders are also the preferred dividend recipients.

Stock Seat $65,000, $69,000 Drop in Year

New York, Jan. 28 (AP).—The sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat was arranged today at $65,000, a drop of $10,000 from the previous transfer on January 12. On the basis of today's sale seat values are only slightly above the 18-year low level established last October, with the transfer of a membership at $61,000. The high quotation for 1937 was $134,000 in January.

Peace, Neutral Groups Assail Defense Boost

Roosevelt Proposal Held Most Serious Faced by This Congress.

Peace organizations and the strict neutrality bloc in Congress struck off immediate answers yesterday to the President's request for increases in the Army and Navy.

Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, characterizing the President's message "as the most important message to Congress since 1917," demanded:

"What is our foreign policy? It's impossible to act on this message, the gravest question we have yet studied, until we know or get some idea of our foreign policy.

Stresses Seriousness.

"Is our line of defense 600 miles up the Yangtze River or on Hawaii or does it mean we'll defend our own coasts? The New Deal has more or less abandoned all its economic ideals and is riding horses in all directions without getting anywhere.

"We haven't yet had in this Congress a more serious problem than now presents itself. What we do here and now may determine the course of future generations."

Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, interrupting the general applause from both sides of a scanty House, defended the Administration's foreign policy, citing the Panay incident and the case of Mrs. Ruth Marie Rubens, American girl jailed in Moscow on espionage charges, as demonstrations of firmness in American policy.

Peace Groups Heard.

Meanwhile the peace organizations banded as the National Council for the Prevention of War issued a statement saying:

"The President's proposed answer to world problems, an enormous armament and taxation increase, stands in striking contrast to the simultaneously announced proposal for a world economic new deal in co-operation with Italy and Germany embodied in the Van Zeeland report." The statement declared the result of the President's proposal would be "world war" and "increased economic chaos," with the armament programs putting "what may well be a fatal additional strain on the world economic system."

John Nevin Sayre, president of the National Peace Conference, asked Congress to make a "searching examination" of the national defense policy "before another dollar is appropriated for increase of our armed forces."

"A One-Ocean Navy."

In Congress, Chairman David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said:

"We have come to the realization recently we have a one-ocean Navy. We should consider building a two-ocean Navy. The general war conditions in the Orient and the military state of mind of European countries undoubtedly have drawn attention to the inadequacies of our Navy and led to a new program."

Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, House minority leader, said he was "willing to do everything necessary for the full and ample protection of our people and our country."

Fish Voices Criticism.

But Representatvie Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, disagreed with the President's views, saying:

"The message amounts to a complete change in our traditional foreign policies and proposes a Navy not for defense but for aggression and to police the world."

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, said he was impressed with the message because of "the moderation of the requests made." He predicted national approval of the message.

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, asserting his belief in preparedness, said the Senate Finance Committee soon would report anti-war-profits legislation in the form of an amendment to the tax bill awaiting action in the House Ways and Means Committee.

Britain Welcomes Increase.

London (Saturday), Jan. 29 (A.P.).—President Roosevelt's recommendations for an expanded naval program were welcomed today in Great Britain, where rearmament is progressing at full speed.

It was pointed out the Government long since had ceased to fear a large United States Navy, but rather looked upon it as a parallel safeguard to keep the world's peace.

The News-Chronicle said Mr. Roosevelt's action was a "choice between two evils" by the decision "to squander wealth on weapons of hideous destruction" rather than permit "enthronement of international gangsterism."

Reich Plays Up News.

Berlin (Saturday), Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Newspapers today prominently displayed Washington reports of President Roosevelt's recommendations for a long-term defense program.

There was no editorial comment.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter headlined its report:

"New rearmament request by Roosevelt merely because other countries rearm."

The Berliner Boersenzeitung said:

"Roosevelt demands increase of all arms—$50,000,000 for experiment with small warcraft."

The Morgen Post said: "Roosevelt demands mobilization of entire nation in case of war."

Rome (Saturday), Jan. 29 (A.P.).—Fascist Italy, rushing a large naval building program of her own, today received news of President Roosevelt's naval construction recommendations without surprise.

Such a move had been expected here since the President's message opening Congress in which he drew a sharp line between democracies and totalitarian states.

First Lady Urges U. S. Co-operate for Peace

New York, Jan. 28 (U.P.).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told the opening session of the American Youth Congress tonight that the United States should co-operate with other nations to maintain peace and cannot hope to escape unscathed through a "self-sufficient" policy if there is large scale war.

Rep. Kenney Rites Slated Monday in New Jersey Town

Funeral services for Representative Kenney, of New Jersey, who fell to his death Thursday from a sixth floor window at the Carleton Hotel, will be held Monday at St. John's Church in Cliffside Park, N. J. Burial will be in Clinton, Mass., his birthplace.

Representative Kenney's body arrived last night at his home in Cliffside Park, the Associated Press reported. Prosecutor John J. Breslin, jr., of Bergen County, a political associate of Kenney, met the body at Newark and with two Bergen County police, escorted it to the home.

The death of the 56-year-old Congressman was held accidental by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, following an investigation of circumstances surrounding the six-floor plunge, and an autopsy.

Both houses of Congress recessed Thursday out of respect to Mr. Kenney, and the following committee was named to attend the funeral: Senator William H. Smathers and John Milton and Representatives George N. Segar, William H. Sutphin, Edward J. Hart, and Frank W. Towey, jr., all of New Jersey.

Surviving Mr. Kenney are his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Kenney, of Cliffside Park, and two sisters, both of Worcester, Mass.

Displaying maps and charts showing large areas of land held "legally and illegally" by Japanese in Davao Province of Mindanao Island, Crawford called upon President Roosevelt and American High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt to exert pressure on the Commonwealth government for laws banning further real estate acquisition by Japanese in the archipelago.

Price Increase Of Bituminous Coal Protested

208 Railroads Tell Court Minimum Scale Is 'Unreasonable.'

Charging the National Bituminous Coal Commission's establishment of minimum prices for locomotive fuel coal was "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable," 209 railroads applied to the United States Court of Appeals yesterday for relief from a ruling they contended would cost them in excess of $22,000,000 annually.

At the same time the commission issued an order announcing that "upon its own motion" it "proposes to review and consider a revision of the present established minimum prices and marketing rules and regulations applying to sales of coal for railroad locomotive fuel."

The order called upon representatives of all district coal producers' boards, code member mine operators and consumers to attend a hearing scheduled to begin here February 14.

In their protest to the Board of Appeals, the railroads asserted they consumed more than 90,000,000 tons of bituminous coal a year and that the minimum price by the commission called for an additional 20 cents a ton.

Coal Concerns Join Plea.

Joining with the rails were the Enos Coal Mining Co. and the Saxton Coal Mining Co., both of Indiana. The former asserted it sold 200,000 tons yearly to the Pennsylvania, while the Saxton Co. said it sold 21,000 tons to the Pennsylvania and a like amount to the Chicago and Eastern Illinois.

The coal companies estimated they could sell their product for as much as 30 cents a ton less than the minimum fixed by the commission and still make a fair profit. They contended they would lose their railroad business if the carriers were forced to pay the prices fixed by the commission, and asked a temporary stay in the effective date of the order and readjustment of the scale.

Contentions of Railroads.

The railroads asserted the commission's order of December 15 was issued without affording the carriers a chance to observe the proceedings and give testimony. They contended no evidence supported the coal price increases.

The bituminous coal code provides an excise tax of 1 cent a ton for members, and 19½ cents a ton more from non-members.

The carriers asked for a transcript of the hearing, and declared the commission exceeded its authority, deprived the railroads of rights and properly without due process of law, and that no reasonable notice was given of the hearings.

To Study "Entire Subject."

At the hearing set for February 14, the commission will attempt to study "the entire subject" of railroad locomotive fuel, it announced. It also will consider the question of discounts or price allowances made by code members to distributors who purchase coal for re-sale in not less than carload lots.

The commission pointed out that that the railroads were among the largest consumers of coal and that hundreds of producers depended upon their business as a backlog.

In its order the commission outlined several proposals for the regulation of locomotive fuel sales, but was careful to point out that the proposals in no sense formed a ruling, and that present prices and marketing regulations would remain in effect "pending final determination of the whole subject of railroad fuel."

Solomon Urges Airport Owned By Government

Asks Private Operation, Sharing Profits With Agencies.

Government ownership of a 400-acre air terminal on the site of the Washington Airport was advocated yesterday by Samuel J. Solomon, manager of the Washington Airport, before the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee. He added, however, he was convinced the terminal, after being developed jointly by the Federal and District Governments, should be operated privately on a profit-sharing basis with the governmental agencies involved.

"The Federal Government is under greater obligation to maintain an airport here than at any other city in the country," he declared, adding that the decision "should be based not on the national defense consideration but upon the fact this is a national airport."

Warns of Hazards.

Solomon said he was convinced air traffic to and from the proposed landing field would conflict with similar operations at Bolling Field, thus creating a serious hazard to aerial navigation. He added that the Washington Monument, Arlington radio towers and industrial buildings would interfere less with operations at Gravelly Point than at Washington Airport.

In this statement he was supported by David L. Behncke, president of the Airline Pilots Association, who appeared before the committee Thursday. Behncke advocated a great national terminal "second to none," at Camp Springs, Md., and expressed only lukewarm approval of the Gravelly Point site.

New Plan Outlined.

The plan submitted yesterday calls for enlargement of Washington Airport by the inclusion of land lying between the present terminal and Columbia pike. The expanded airport also would include land from the Agricultural Experimental Farm, and would extend almost to the southwest corner of Arlington Cemetery. Four paved runways are provided with lengths varying from 4,570 feet to 4,715 feet.

Private land to be acquired, Solomon said, is assessed at $297,000, but he added that this figure was far below its true value. He estimated that the cost of acquiring the additional land and completing the terminal would be $3,500,000 "at the outside."

Roosevelt Arms Message Fails to Bring Stock Boom

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

New York, Jan. 28.—The long-awaited special national defense message of the President came today, but the hope in trading quarters that the message would call for immediate sharply increased expenditures for armaments and bolster failing corporate profits was not fulfilled.

President Roosevelt, however, calculated that only about $29,000,000 could be spent in the 1939 fiscal year—"a drop in the bucket," traders said — and in the second instance Mr. Roosevelt's warning to Congress to enact legislation designed to eliminate profiteering in any future war gave rise to the feeling in some quarters that the business firms which might receive government contracts might have profits trimmed.

Stocks opened steady, pushed up to moderate gains around the end of the first hour under lead of aircraft, gold and steel shares, and then developed a reactionary tone when the naval message was issued.

Luther C. Ball, 69, 'Behind-the-Scene' 31 Years, Retired

LUTHER C. BALL.

Luther C. Ball, one of the "behind-the-scenes" men at the Union Station here who make baggage move so swiftly and efficiently—was retired yesterday after 31 years service with the Washington Terminal Co.

Now 69, but erect and with some facial characteristics of the Ball family of Virginia (one of whom was George Washington's mother), he was presented with a purse, gift of fellow employes, by H. J. Marshall, general baggage agent. A. F. Granholm, in charge of the baggage room, gave him a bouquet on behalf of associates.

Ball went to work for the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1892 and was transferred to the Terminal Co. in 1907. He was the company's first chief clerk and for years has been active in the Washington Terminal Brotherhood of Railway Clerks.

Maj. Gen. Croft, Retired Chief of Infantry, Dies

Maj. Gen. Edward Croft, 62, U. S. Army, retired, who was chief of infantry until last May, died of pneumonia yesterday in Greenville, S. C.

A graduate of the Citadel, the military college of South Carolina, he entered the Army in 1898 and served in Puerto Rico and at Camp Meade, Pa., before going to the Philippines the following year. During the Philippine Insurrection he served as aide-de-camp to Brig. Gen. R. P. Hughes.

Gen. Croft was graduated from the General Service and Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., in 1924, and then served with the Infantry at Fort Logan, Okla.

In the World War he served in France as commander of the Second Battalion, Twenty-sixth Infantry, returning to the United States on August 31, 1917, to take charge of the divisions schools and R. O. T. C. at Camp Devens, Mass.

Gen. Croft was executive officer at Camp Meade, Md., in 1919, and then attended the School of the Line, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., from which he was graduated in 1920. The following year he completed the course at the General Staff School, and after serving as instructor there attended the Army War College here.

He was serving as commander of the Tenth Infantry at Fort Thomas, Ky., when he was appointed chief of infantry in 1933.

Gen. Croft, who was on the General Staff Corps eligible list, had been awarded the Silver Star Medal and the Purple Heart.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Maribel W. Croft, of Greenville, and one son, Edward Croft, jr.

Appeals Made For Red Cross Funds to China

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Ernest J. Swift, Dr. E. DeWitt Jones Talk on Radio.

Ernest J. Swift, vice chairman of the Red Cross in charge of foreign operations; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Washington Post, and Dr. Edgar DeWitt Jones, president of the Federal Council of Churches, made a radio appeal last night for funds to support Red Cross relief efforts in China.

Their appeal, broadcast over an N. B. C. blue network, came after Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the American Red Cross, had announced that reports from chapters throughout the country indicated the Chinese Relief Fund was receiving "favorable response."

"Conditions Appalling."

Swift, mentioning the President's request for aid for the Chinese, declared that "conditions in China are truly appalling."

"Economic life is completely dislocated," he said. "All classes are being caught in a whirlpool of distress. Merchants and clerks, professors and students, servants and laborers are living side by side in refugee camps."

He asserted that women and children had been the greatest sufferers and that many families, in spite of the cold, were clad only in the thinnest of rags.

Have Not Asked for Help.

Pointing out that funds collected for relief would be used for "a destitute civilian population" and not for the Chinese military forces, Mrs. Meyer declared the Chinese were meeting their fate with courage and had not asked for our help. While they had been busy at a program of national improvement and unification, she said, they were unprepared for the ordeal of war.

Contrasting the peace and security of the radio listeners with the "constant danger and terror to which the civilian population of China is exposed," Mrs. Meyer asserted there was no way to determine how many Chinese were starving.

"Another appalling aspect of this situation," she said, "is that the people have no means of escape to sections where peace reigns. Transportation is tied up. Junks cannot move along the canals. Railways are destroyed or are being used for military purposes only. And even at best, remember that China is not yet as well organized as our own country. Good roads are still scarce and communication is often difficult. That means help arrives slowly and if the facilities do not exist, no help whatever can be expected."

Any Amount Welcome.

She assured the listeners that any contribution, no matter how small, would be received at any Red Cross chapter and that every cent contributed would go directly to the aid of the Chinese, without any deductions.

Swift and Mrs. Meyer spoke from Washington over WMAL. Dr. Jones, speaking from New York on the same program, said the relief project had the support of many churches, and asked that no one hesitate because of the belief that a small contribution might be futile.

"Remember," he said, "that goodwill is never lost."

Senate Group Named to Study Milton Seating

Senators King, Logan, Austin to Ponder Protests of Labor League.

The Senate Elections Committee decided yesterday to name a subcommittee of three members to study protests by Labor's Non-Partisan League and other organizations and individuals against the seating of Senator John Milton (Democrat), New Jersey.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), Georgia, then appointed Senators William H. King (Democrat), Utah; M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, and Warren R. Austin (Republican), Vermont, as the subcommittee. He said he would urge its members to have a report ready for the full committee early next week.

Simultaneously, some opposition to confirmation of Robert H. Jackson as Solicitor General developed in the Senate Judiciary Committee. However expressions from most Senators indicated the nomination would be approved.

Senators Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, and King called for hearings on the nomination. They said they wanted to question Jackson about his testimony before the House Judiciary Committee in the investigation of Federal Judge Geiger of Milwaukee.

"I would like to ask him," Burke said, "about his statement intimating he approved the use of criminal action to force desired results in civil matters."

Among persons mentioned as possible successors to Jackson as Assistant Attorney General, were Golden W. Bell, assistant solicitor general; Brien McMahon, assistant attorney general in charge of criminal cases; Donald Richberg, former NRA administrator, and Frank Weideman, former chief of the Justice Department's tax division.

Borah Confers With President On Monopolies

Inclusion of License Plan in New Deal Measure Being Considered.

Inclusion of the "Federal licensing" principle of the Borah-O'Mahoney bill in the Administration's proposed antimonopoly legislation was believed under consideration yesterday by the President.

Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, life-long foe of monopolies, and co-author of the licensing measure, was called to the White House for a discussion of antimonopoly proposals.

Earlier this week, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Montana, was called in by the President for a conference.

Attitude Not Revealed.

As he left the White House, Borah declined to discuss the President's attitude toward the bill which would empower the Federal Trade Commission to license corporations engaged in interstate commerce. Specification that the corporations refrain from monopolistic and certain "unfair" trade practices would be written into the licenses, along with prohibitions on child labor.

It has been reported the President will seek further strengthening of anti-trust laws in his forthcoming anti-monopoly message, but details remain to be worked out. Friends of the Borah-O'Mahoney bill said they believed the White House conferences indicated the "Federal licensing principle, at least," is under serious consideration.

O'Mahoney To Speak.

O'Mahoney, who has delivered more than a score of speeches in support of the plan, today will discuss the proposal before a luncheon meeting of the City Club of Cleveland, Ohio.

Meanwhile, Administration conferences on legislation to abolish bank holding companies continued yesterday. The legislation is being drafted by a subcommittee of the interdepartmental committee on banking. Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, chairman of the Senate banking subcommittee, may introduce the Administration's bill.

Meeting yesterday with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau on the proposal were Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board; Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Chairman Leo T. Crowley, of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor, Chairman William O. Douglas, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and others.

Spokesmen for the group reported "progress".

INSPECTOR WADE

Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Edgar Wallace

Bob Burns Says—

It looks like the days of the old-fashioned slave driver are over. The modern employer studies his men and puts 'em in a department best suited to their talents.

I had 'a cousin down home who got a job in a department store and it looked for a while like he would be a failure because he kept fallin' asleep. Finally the proprietor made the biggest asset in the store out of my cousin.

He put him behind the pajama counter and put a sign on him that said "Our pajamas are of such superior quality that even the man who sells 'em can't keep awake."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Willa Semple, pianist; Flora McGill Keefer, mezzo-contralto (Dorothy Radde Emery, accompanist), and Mary Howe, composer-pianist. Program: Preludes and Fugues in G major and G minor (Bach), Sonata in E minor, Op. 90 (Beethoven), Ein Traum (Grieg), Tristesse Eternelle (Chopin-d'Astoria), Floods of Spring (Rakhmaninov), Chanson Souvenir, Berceuse, Herbsttag, Old English Lullaby, Splendid Tear (Mary Howe).

A modest and meritorious young artist, Willa Semple handled with a neat competence the G major and G minor preludes and fugues of Bach at the beginning of the Friday Morning Music Club's weekly concert in Barker Hall yesterday. Thanks to a light touch and knowledgable pedaling, she phrased with clarity and precision. Later in the program she gave an enjoyable reading of the E minor sonata, which Beethoven dedicated to Count Moriz von Lichnovski shortly after the latter's marriage with a plebian and charming singer.

According to Schindler, Beethoven laughingly told the Count that in this sonata he had described the courtship, expressing in the first movement the struggle between head and heart, and in the second movement an affectionate conversation with the loved one. It was in this romantic mood that Miss Semple performed the work with a warmth commendable for its dynamic restraint.

Flora McGill Keefer, in her first group, disclosed the amplitude and firm timber of her voice in familiar songs by Grieg and Rakhmaninov and in D'Astoria's arrangement of Chopin's E major Etude. While these selections were pleasingly projected, they were not as interesting as the five songs by Mary Howe interpreted later with the composer at the piano.

Mrs. Howe has in a marked degree that sensitiveness to poetry which is indispensable in the writing of effective songs. In each of these lyrcis she reflected faithfully the implications of the texts. Thus, in "Chanson Souvenir" by Francis Viele-Griffin, the expatriated American who so thoroughly assimilated the French language and culture that he became one of the principal symbolist poets, she captured precisely the right accents for the evocation of a nebulous beauty.

Prosecutor's Son Is Kidnap Target

Los Angeles, Jan. 28 (AP).—Joseph Fainer, appointed Wednesday by District Atttorney Buron Fitts to lead the inquiry into the attempted assassination of Harry Raymond, said today he was told over the telephone:

"If you don't get out of the case, we will pull a Lindbergh on your baby—and we mean business."

As a consequence, Fainer sent his wife and son to Honolulu.

Acting Police Capt. Earle Kynette is free under $15,000 bond on a charge of attempting to kill Raymond by placing a bomb in his car.

Bessie the Wild Boar, Herself

The head of a wild boar named Bessie adorns the office wall of Dr. H. L. Shantz in the Forestry Service here. The point is, there aren't so many wild boar in this country and the Forest Service has discovered how they got here. Bessie is a sample—besides being a lady.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Bessie the Boar.

The eyes of Bessie the Wild Boar are things to linger on. Bessie looks upon you from her mounting in the office of Dr. Homer L. Shantz, of the Forestry Service. You notice that her eyes are the only softening influence in a long face so full of teeth, and while you study the strange mechanism that gives a blandness to the eyes and a ferocity to the mouth Dr. Shantz—likely as not—will be saying:

"The wild boar is a ward of the Government . . ." And he will add, in a sort of aside, that the wild boar is a very ferocious fellow, indeed; don't be betrayed by the look in Bessie's eyes; women have deceptive eyes, and Bessie was a lady!

Dr. Shantz is an elderly gentleman, and the head of a division. He is a favorite with every one in the division; they admire his scholarly researches, but, more in his favor, they like him because he's mellow, like an old pipe that men smoke in the tangled places where the likes of Bessie the Wild Boar lurk. The Doctor always becomes mellow when he speaks of Bessie.

* * * *

For there aren't many wild boards in this country—not over 500—and even that may be stretching the figure. Their presence, welcome enough but not too welcome, is traced to a thought in an Englishman's head. The fellow had the notion 'twould be jolly good sport to hunt the wild boar in America. So he and other companionable old chappies sprung the notion on George Gordon Moore, of New York, who, about 1912 acquired great lands about Hooper Bald, N. C., about two miles from the North Carolina-Tennessee frontier. They built a hunting lodge and fenced off a sizable tract.

The first importation involved 10,000 eggs of the English ring neck pheasants; some black bear and elk and wild boar, the latter of the African and Prussian breeds. There Bessie came to our national life.

* * * *

Upon this enterprise frustration encroached when the World War began and the Britons went to foreign fields that are forever England. The likes of Bessie remained in the big-fenced inclosure. Nothing occurred until about 1920, when, according to one version, someone went in to hunt them and the wild boars, in various formations, charged the fence and sent the rail splinters flying. It was so that the likes of Bessie now frequent the Cherokee National Forest.

People soon forgot the Britons' enterprise. They began suspecting that the "wild hogs" were ordinary razorbacks. But not so. They're as real wild boars as an Englishman ever dreamed of into an open hearth. Dr. Shantz is sure of it. The story of the Englishman vindicates it.

* * * *

She has the long snout, the stiff, bristly hair underlain with a coat of woolly fur and a breastplate of heavy gristle. The tusks are from 3 to 7 inches long, and very sharp. Also, the likes of Bessie are very large, standing much higher than a hog; and buttressed with shoulders like a padded football player. Just recently, one charged a game warden in the Cherokee and felled him with such force as resulted in a report to Washington. The wild boar is ferocious, to say the least.

"They can whip a pack of dogs and are not afraid to tackle a bear; they will unhesitatingly charge a man; they leap fences and obstacles like deer . . ." Dr. Shantz went on, while you looked at Bessie and marveled how such eyes could be in the same head with those teeth.

Now, the habits of the wild boar are as engaging as the Englishman's idea of bringing them here. The beast wants no association with man and plainly indicates it. It may even feel a superiority to man; certainly it knows it is the only survivor of a man-made idea—the idea of importing it here—knows that it outlasted the superior idea of even an Englishman. So the likes of Bessie by day frequent the tangled places, the impassable thickets, to issue forth disdainfully at night, with rambunctious snorts, to feed.

* * * *

They carouse along from the "shaded and moist coves" to the blackberry thickets; when the blackberries are gone they move to higher ground and the huckleberry, and when these are exhausted they turn to apples. And all the while they look for something to charge, be it man, bear, a rail fence or the Notre Dame line.

Bessie is in two parts in Dr. Shantz' office. One of these is her head, beautifully mounted. The other is her coat, an amazing fabrication. If you know Dr. Shantz' quite well he will tell you a secret ambition:

He would have Bessie stuffed entire and placed on the floor, behind a little rail in his office. But dignity—that useless baggage—inhibits him. It would be only then that Bessie's eyes would show to real and soulful effect. For Bessie's eyes, glass things with a dream were actually imported from Germany especially for Bessie. That's what they all think of her.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

There is a vast difference in the relative importance of tricks. Some tricks may be called vital—others are comparatively unimportant. The first duty of a declarer is to differentiate in this respect. To lose a contract like the one in today's hand is inexcusable.

West, dealer.
North-South, 30 part-score.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	2 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened his heart King and, when he saw East's deuce and declarer's nine, promptly shifted to the diamond Queen. Dummys' Ace was played and the trump finesse was taken. West, in with the King, continued with diamonds, and declarer suddenly awoke to the fact that his contract was in jeopardy. He won with the diamond King and drew the last outstanding trump, then led the Jack of hearts. West clattered up with the Ace and led a third diamond. Now, although the heart Queen was established in dummy there was absolutely no use for it. Declarer could not avoid the club finesse and, not unnaturally (when one considers the bidding), it lost to West's King.

Declarer had made an atrocious play in finessin' for the King of trumps before establishing dummy's heart Queen. The vital trick in this hand was, not a heart, but a diamond. In other words, declarer could well afford to lose one trump trick in addition to two hearts and one club. If a trump trick had to be lost, there was no way of saving it. There was, however, a way to guard against a diamond loser and that is what should have been done. Obviously, it was easier to make the contract than to lose it, but that does not mean that declarer deserved any credit for his feat.

'Floating' Population Too Big For D. C. Police, Expert Says

Washington's "above the average crime record" was attributed Thursday night by Maj. W. H. Drane Lester, assistant director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to a police force that is too small to cope with the District's huge "floating" population.

He was speaking on "Modern Trends in Criminology" in the Public Health Forum of Georgetown University, during which he also emphasized the connection between disease and juvenile delinquency.

Maj. Lester cited a study made by the Bureau of Investigation of crime in 88 cities of over 100,000 population, which furnished conclusive evidence, he said, that "crime increases when the relative proportion of policemen to population decreases."

Despite the fact that Washington tied for second place with Boston in this group—2.9 policemen per 1,000 population in 1935—a panel discussion that followed emphasized that Washington's "advertised crime wave" had brought to light that the District is well above the average in its crime record.

Maj. Lester contended that the answer "no doubt was due to the fact that Washington has over 1,000,000 visitors per annum," a floating population equalled by few other cities.

Participating in the panel were Dr. John H. Cavanagh, chairman of the forum; the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the Georgetown Law School; Profs. James A. Toomey and A. Philip Kane, of the law school; Dr. Mario Mollari of the medical school, and Dr. Andrew E. Kress, of the college faculty.
